475 Millions Clipped Off Army Funds; Personnel Hit

74,631 Civilians, 20,100 Officers Face Dismissal; Warrant Ranks to Be Trimmed

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Slashing deeply into officer and civilian personnel rolls, the House Appropriations Committee yesterday cut 475 millions from the Army's 1948 military budget.

The 8.3 per cent reduction gave the War Department $5,240,982,423 for military activities during the next fiscal year. Foreign relief and Army civil function funds will be voted in a later bill.

More than half of money slash—$293,936,216—will come out of appropriations for pay of personnel. The committee ordered the firing of 74,631 civilian jobholders and cut Army officer strength by 20,100.

While Army chiefs declined any immediate comment on the House action, it was evident that their chief concern was over the heavy civilian slash and the reduction of warrant officers.

Career Plan Hit

In cutting officer personnel from 146,000 to 126,000, the committee reduced warrant ranks by 2600. This promises to nullify the recently announced Army enlisted career plan.

The program—aimed at stimulating recruiting and attracting a high-type of volunteers—provided for enlarging the warrant grades to permit soldiers to rise to higher pay and responsibilities.

But although there was no Army comment on the funds cut, Secretary of War Patterson and General Eisenhower, Chief of Staff, had warned the committee earlier that the President's budget represented the "irreducible minimum" on which they could operate and carry out the Army's job.

Patterson told the group that the President's budget represented the "barest rudiments of security" for the country. His testimony—taken behind closed doors—was released at the same time as the bill.

Personnel Cut 80,000

The War chief outlined to the committee the reduction already made by Budget Bureau—an unusual action. Department officials are supposed to back the Administration's budget estimates.

Patterson revealed that the Administration had cut Army personnel by 80,000; had halved the National Guard and Reserve program; had "delayed advent of new weapons and material due to curtailment of research"; had totally eliminated the equipment-modernization program of the ground forces and "drastically" curtailed the equipment-modernization program of the Air Forces.

The committee heeded his pleas to a considerable extent. Approved without change were budget requests for:

Four hundred million dollars to pay for new aircraft and spare parts delivered next year, plus 280 millions in contract authorization for ordering additional planes.

A total of 110 millions for the National Guard, 56 millions for the Organized Reserves, and $24,800,000 for the ROTC, except for a cut of $1,024,184 in civilian personnel for the ORC.

The full amount of $222,216,400 for research and development.

A program costing $23,809,500 for industrial mobilization planning to speed conversion of industry to war status in an emergency.

Truman Returns To White House After 12-Day Vigil

President Truman returned to the Capital yesterday from a 12-day visit with his ailing mother, Mrs. Martha Truman, in Grandview, Mo.

The President's plane, the Sacred Cow, landed at the National Airport at 1:09 Eastern standard time, after a flight from Kansas City. Before leaving there at 9:06 a. m., Eastern standard time.

Mr. Truman had received assurances that the condition of his 94-year-old mother is improved.

Secretary of State Marshall, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder and top White House officials were on hand to welcome the President, Mrs. Truman and their daughter, Margaret.

"I never spent such a week," Mr. Truman commented to the two Cabinet members, recalling the anxious days before his mother became unconscious.

131 D. C. Men Nominated for Army Officers

Truman Selections From National Guard And Reserve Rolls

President Truman yesterday nominated 9200 National Guard and Reserve officers for Regular Army appointments, among whom were 303 District area residents.

Of those from this area, 131 live in the District itself, 138 in nearby Virginia counties and 34 in Maryland counties bordering the District. Altogether, 334 were named from Virginia and 144 from Maryland.

These officers were chosen from 70,000 applicants for Regular commissions under the second of three programs to select 25,000 officers from civilian components of the Army. So far, 20,850 have been named, with a third increment to be named in three or four months.

About two thirds of those whose names were sent to the Senate yesterday were appointed in the Air Corps.

Bulgaria Claims American Colonel Slandered Nation

Sofia, May 29 (AP).—The Bulgarian government complained to the United States today that it had been slandered by an American Army colonel and that his presence in Bulgaria was "undesirable." Col. John Struman of the Allied Control Commission and Dr. Blagol Angelov, the commission's physician, "spread slander against the Bulgarian government and against the Soviet Union."

The Bulgarians said they tore down a photograph of Premier Dimitrov. The two said dancers jarred it down.

Angelov, a Bulgarian citizen, it was said, would be arrested and brought to trial.

Truman Asks Flag Day Observance on June 14

President Truman yesterday designated June 14 as Flag Day, in accordance with custom.

In a proclamation, he directed Federal officials, requested State and local officials, and urged the American people to fly the American Flag from buildings and homes on that date.

10.5-30% Tax Cut Approved By Conferees

House, Senate Move To Hasten Passage Despite Veto Threat

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

House-Senate conferees yesterday reached full agreement on a 10½ to 30 per cent cut in taxes starting July 1 and arranged to speed the bill to final passage Monday.

President Truman is expected to veto the bill, but Democratic leaders backed away from any flat forecast.

Knutson Urges Approval

As all hands awaited the White House last word:

1. House Ways and Means Chairman Harold Knutson (R., Minn.), chief author of the bill, called on the President to sign it, saying: "It is the right thing to do. The Nation demands it."

2. Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.), who voted for the bill and signed the conference report, said he hoped the President would sign, but added: "If the President vetoes it on the ground that it endangers our national credit and Treasury solvency, I shall not vote to override. He is in the best position to know."

Shy of Two-Thirds

George's statement squelched any lingering doubt that a presidential veto could or would be overriden. In passing the bill Wednesday the Senate fell shy of a two-thirds margin, even with the influential Georgian and six other Democrats supporting the legislation.

One Senate Democrat, who voted against the bill, meanwhile told reporters he thought Mr. Truman "should take his time, and call in the best economic advisers he can find, before making a decision." He was Senator John L. Sparkman (D., Ala.), former speakers bureau chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Agreeing on the final text of the bill in less than two hours, House-Senate managers accepted in full nonretroactive Senate provisions making only half the reduction applicable to 1947 incomes, but invoking the full cut in 1948 and

House Unit Would Fire 74,631 In War Department, 7500 Here

By Jerry Klutz
Post Reporter

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday recommended that the War Department fire 74,631 civilian employes in this country and abroad, and it told in detail where it thought the dismissals could be made.

However, the Department yesterday completed the major task of giving 30-day dismissal notices to more than 40,000 of its employes. The cut suggested by the committee officials say, could be met by laying off an additional 45,000 people.

In and nearby Washington the Department had 31,000 civilians on May 1. A minimum of 7500 of these jobs would be wiped out in the slash now under way and the new cut proposed by the committee, if that becomes mandatory.

Top War officials yesterday were debating when to make the proposed new lay-offs. They had tentatively planned to give out 45,000 provisional notices on June 15, to become effective on June 30, so that terminal leave costs could be paid out of 1947 funds. And if Congress gave the Department more money in the meantime, all or part of the notices would be withdrawn.

But Civil Service exploded that plan. Its officials told the War Department that the law and its regulations require that at least 30 days must elapse between the

Youths Held 1st Degree Murderers

Harris, Hall, Gray Will Go to Chair; Verdict Reached In Hour and Half

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

A District Court jury yesterday found three youths guilty of first-degree murder in the slaying of Frank C. Kelly, 56.

Death in the electric chair is mandatory under the District of Columbia Code. Kelly, a Government electrician, was shot in the back and killed in an attempted holdup on 11th st. near Euclid st. nw., on the night of March 11.

None of the defendants, Shirley Harris, 23; Joseph Gray, 19, and Herbert H. Hall, 18, showed emotion as the verdict was read by Jury Foreman Samuel S. Board, a personnel consultant of 4836 MacArthur blvd. nw. The jury deliberated an hour and a half.

Girl Friend Sobs

A girl friend of Hall's, Ida Brown, 18, who had appeared earlier as a Government witness, burst into loud screams at the verdict and fell sobbing to the floor. Court attendants helped her from the courtroom.

Kelly, father of four children, was shot as he was en route home, 4004 New Hampshire ave. nw., from a Parent-Teachers Association meeting at Central High School.

Death was first attributed to natural causes, and it was not until 14 hours after his body was found that it was discovered he had been shot.

The first clew police had was a battered bullet said by ballistics expert to have been fired from a .38-caliber Smith & Wesson revolver.

Gun Found in Sewer

A gun of that type had been stolen in a housebreaking, police found. A housebreaking suspect told police he had given the weapon to Gray. The gun later was found in a sewer at 9th st. and Barry pl. nw.

Gray, Harris and Hall were arrested early March 16 and signed

Australians Consider Bill to Fine Communists

Canberra, Australia, May 29 (U.P.). The House of Representatives today considered a bill that would cause the Communist Party to be fined up to $19,380 and various members to serve a year in jail if the Communist-run builders' union boycotts construction of a great rocket bomb range across the western deserts.

The bill was certain to pass, since it had the approval of Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Herbert V. Evatt and the ruling Labor Party. The Labor Party approved it before it was introduced.

U. S., Britain Form 2 Zone German Pact

Action Taken Despite Refusals of French, Russians to Enter Union of All Reich

Berlin, May 29 (U.P.).—The United States and Britain today announced the creation of an all-German Bizonal Economic Council.

The sweeping move to get the two western zones back on their feet was made despite Russian and French refusals to bring their zones into an economic union covering the whole Reich.

Lieut. Gen. Sir Brian Robertson, British deputy military governor, who announced creation of the council jointly with Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor, said the new council would be neither the "shadow of a cabinet" nor the "shadow of a parliament."

It will have representatives from all the States in both zones, from among whom will be selected an executive committee. They will have the day-to-day responsibility of coordinating the work of lesser economic agencies in accordance with the council's policies.

"The first thing it (the Council) isn't is anything in the nature of a decision to divide Germany," Robertson said.

"The second thing is that it isn't anymore than is said in the statement, the formal announcement we have issued—namely, that it is an economic council to assist us in economic reconstruction of both zones as an integrated economic area."

Longest U. S.-British Step

Nevertheless, it was the longest step Britain and the United States have taken toward making the Germans plan their own economic renaissance. Under the Potsdam agreement, economic unity was provided for all four zones—United States, British, Russian and French.

The Russian and French have refused steadfastly to enter any such union. The western zones are in the midst of a food crisis, despite American and British outlays of more than 300 million dollars for food imports. Therefore, it has been necessary for the United States and Britain to find means of raising their zones' export to balance the cost of imports.

The creation of the council was the first major step toward that goal, although everything the council does is subject to approval by the two military governments. The level of German industry in

Gen. Mark W. Clark, former U. S. Army commander in Austria, yesterday received the Oak Leaf Cluster to the Distinguished Service Medal for outstanding services in Europe.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Army Chief of Staff, made the presentation. He cited Clark for "keen judgment, exceptional foresight, high initiative and brilliant leadership" in handling U. S. policy in Austria.

Communists Taking Over

Anti-Red Reported Forced Out Of Office in Hungarian Coup

By Jack Guinn

Budapest, May 29 (AP).—A high Hungarian source said Premier Ferenc Nagy of the Anti-Communist Small Landholders Party phoned his resignation from his vacation resort in Switzerland today.

The informant said Nagy had been "pushed from office" by the minority Communist Party, and pro-American Hungarians said it was a coup d'etat that spelled the beginning of a complete Communist police state in Hungary.

The informant, who earlier had disclosed that the Russians had charged Nagy and two other high officials with being implicated in a plot to overthrow "Hungarian democracy," said Nagy would not return to Hungary.

The resignation was accepted at an emergency meeting of the leaders of the Small Landholders, Communist, Social Democrat and Peasant Parties, main Hungarian political groups.

Imre Oltvanyi was understood to have been tentatively decided upon as Nagy's successor. Oltvanyi is a former president of the national bank and a left-wing member of Nagy's party.

It was understood that Erno Mihalfyi, minister of information, would take Nagy's 4-year-old son to Switzerland. His wife, daughter and older son already are out of the country.

An important official said the Russian charges against Nagy were

Trees, Wires Blown Down

District Area Lashed By 73-Mi. Windstorm

A thunderstorm with gusts of wind up to 73 miles an hour struck Washington shortly after 6 o'clock last night, felling trees and wires in both the city and its suburbs.

The Weather Bureau said the wind was one of the highest ever recorded here.

The severe storm followed by 30 minutes a lighter one which came officially at 5:22 p. m., catching thousands en route home from work.

The earlier storm, which lasted but five minutes, toppled at least a half dozen trees, although the Weather Bureau recorded gusts only up to 41 miles an hour. One tree fell on a car in the 1400 block of 20th st. nw., only a few seconds after two occupants jumped to safety.

Clouds Darken Sky

Sky-darkening clouds and a heavy rain accompanied the second storm.

The 73-mile-an-hour gust was recorded at the Weather Bureau station at National Airport at 6:12 p. m. During a 10-minute period, the weather observer there said a number of 50-mile gusts were recorded.

The torrential rain stalled dozens of cars and trucks on highways to Arlington and Alexandria. Sheets of water a foot deep were reported on highways near National Airport.

Traffic was tied up nearly an hour at 14th st. bridge, as cars backed up in three lanes to beyond the Bureau of Engraving and Printing buildings and into roadways of Potomac Park.

The storm followed Washington's hottest day of the year.

Theremometers Hit 90

Thermometers hit 90 at 3:24 p. m., the highest since last September 9. The previous high this year was 89 on May 13.

The Weather Bureau expected cooler temperatures to follow the storm, with a drop into the 50s today. Clearing skies are expected this afternoon.

Storm warnings were sent out to boats and airplanes hours before the storm struck.

50 Millions Schools Loan Recommended

D. C. Board Requests Commission to Seek Federal Funds

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The Board of Education yesterday asked the Commissioners to seek a loan from the Federal Government to provide 50 million dollars worth of new school buildings.

The request was contained in a six-page report prepared by Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning and approved by the finance committee of the school board.

Would Be Interest Free

Under the proposed plan the money would be granted interest free and would be used over a five-year period. It would be repaid after completion of the building program in annual amounts incorporated in the District budget.

Without a loan, the report stated, the present backlog of school needs will never be met.

The report was released by the Commissioners with a letter of reply to Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education.

No "Hasty" Decision

"We cannot pass hastily on so grave and fundamental a question as that of financing capital improvements by large-scale loans," the Commissioners commented.

"The action taken by Congress on our recommendations for increased revenue will throw additional light on whether we can provide essential improvements out of current revenues, as has been done in the past."

The report requested no specific sum but asked for an "amount to assure the providing of essential buildings for the school system."

Cited in the report was the $49,562,409 estimate of school building needs contained in a "Six-Year Plan" for the city prepared by Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner for the District.

When his report was prepared a year ago, General Young estimated the cost of the school building program at $39,235,624. Re-

Many Leaving Capital for Long Weekend

Annual Ceremonies In Arlington to Head Memorial Day Rites

The holiday exodus which began yesterday for the three-day Memorial Day weekend promised to break postwar recreation travel records, weather permitting.

The annual ceremonies this morning at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and in the Amphitheatre at Arlington National Cemetery head the list of services planned in this area to commemorate those who died in the Nation's wars.

On behalf of President Truman, a wreath will be placed at the Unknown Soldier's Grave by Col. Don E. Lowry, White House aide, at 11 a. m.

Of the numerous Memorial Day observances planned for the area today by patriotic organizations, the principal one will be the annual program at Arlington National Cemetery, at 11:45 a. m. in the amphitheater, which will be preceded by the laying of many wreaths at the Unknown Solider's Tomb by various groups.

Airlines expect either all-time or postwar records of holiday travel to be broken. Railroads serving Washington added 30 extra sections, in addition to 10 special trains bringing Shriners back from their Atlantic City convention. Bus lines advance ticket sales have prompted the commandeering of a number of vehicles from other areas for trips starting here.

Motor Trips Planned

The American Automobile Association has received an average of 803 queries on motoring information daily for the past two weeks, highest in the club's history. The data asked indicated plans for longer trips than usual.

A full three days' respite from work for more than half the city's workers, unrestricted travel and gasoline, and good employment conditions are factors in the holiday activity.

Government offices, banks, schools and the higher courts will be closed today and tomorrow,

Canal to Be Dry 3 Weeks

Dike Break Robs Flour Mill, Paper Plant of Day's Work

Both the Wilkins-Rogers Flour Mill and the Districtof Columbia Paper Mill lost a full 24 hours of production because of the dike break Wednesday in the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, company officials revealed yesterday.

National Park Services and the District Sewer Department estimated that the C. & O. Canal will be a dry bed of mud for at least the next three weeks until the break can be repaired.

A four-mile stretch of the canal, up to the Brookmont Locks, is now without water.

The two mills normally generate electricity from the canal water. Both were connected up to Pepco current yesterday afternoon.

E. G. Quinn, sales manager of Wilkins-Rogers, estimated that a full day's production of 80,000 pounds of flour and 75 tons of poultry and dairy feed was lost because of the break.

Hugh Nicholson, superintendent of the paper mill, said the company will lose between 56 and 63 tons of production because they cannot resume operations until Monday. Water used to process the paper will have to be pumped up from the Potomac River, he said.

Mrs. Julia King, keeper of the Brookmont Locks, said that all the 72 locks along the 138-mile canal stretch have been shut tight.

The breach in the canal dike was caused by a break in the 100-year-old stone culvert, which ran underneath the canal at Weaver pl. nw. This will be replaced with a 72-inch concrete pipe culvert.

Five Taken From Flames In LaGuardia Field Crash

39 Are Believed Doomed in Smash; Pilot Is Among Those Rescued

BULLETIN

New York, May 29 (AP).—A plane which police and airport officials said was a United Airlines DC-4 crashed and burned near LaGuardia Field tonight, and police said a short time later that 44 persons were believed aboard and that about five escaped death.

New York, May 29 (U.P.).—A four-motored airliner crashed in the rainy dusk on the edge of New York's huge LaGuardia Airport tonight and broke into flames that trapped an unknown number of passengers in the wreckage.

The huge plane operated by United Airlines plummeted into the swampy grounds of the Academy of Aeronautics, 600 feet from the southeast end of the main runway at 8:10 p. m. Students and instructors rushed from the academy building and pulled the pilot and five other persons from the wreckage. Then flames enveloped the wreckage and they were driven back.

The pilot was identified as Arthur Baldwin. He was semiconscious, burned about the neck, bleeding from the face, and evidently had been thrown out of the pilot's compartment by the impact of the crash. The five others were laid out on the ground nearby, awaiting the arrival of physicians and ambulances. All were alive but their condition was not ascertained immediately. Witnesses said three were women.

Three Missing in Crash

Fairbanks, Alaska, May 29 (AP). A B-29 bomber crashed and burned shortly after taking off from Ladd Field here today and the Army public relations office said three men were reported missing.

The other nine members of the crew escaped serious injury but were brought to the Ladd Field Station Hospital. All of the field's rescue equipment was called into use. Small power boats were used to get help across the Chena River to the crash scene and helicopters were flown over the spot.

Senate Votes 15% Rent Rise If Agreed On

By The Associated Press

The Senate yesterday approved, 48 to 26, a proposal by Senator Hawkes (R., N. J.), permitting an increase up to 15 per cent in rents in cases where landlords and tenants mutually agree on the raise.

The House has approved a similar provision.

The Hawkes proposal is an amendment to a bill that would extend Federal rent controls to February 29, 1948. The present rent law expires June 30.

Under the amendment such voluntary agreements would permit an increase not to exceed 15 per cent above the rent in effect for the property on September 1, 1946. The agreements could be entered into up to December 31, 1947, and would run through 1948.

The Senate also approved by a voice vote a formula which Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), said would require the removal of rent controls in about 30 defense rental areas each month.

It directs Housing Expediter Frank Creedon to lift rent controls at the end of each month in at least 5 per cent of the number of areas under control when the bill becomes law.

By a voice vote, the Senate also adopted an amendment by Senator Ives (R., N. Y.), requiring a State to take positive, affirmative action before taking over rent control, as long as Federal rent control is in effect.

time an employe is notified of dismissal and removal from the rolls.

However, it was explained that in case of emergency it isn't necessary for employes to be on active duty the entire 30 days. In any event, it's impossible for the Department to get out the new notices and give the employes 30 days notice before June 30.

Now there's a move on to get the tentative notices between June 15 and July 1, but to try to get Congress to permit the Department to use 1947 funds to pay the terminal leave bill.

Under the law, 1947 money can't be used after July 1 when 1948 funds become available. If the costly annual leave must be paid out of 1948 appropriations, an even greater number of employes must be fired to offset the cost. The law requires agencies to make lump sum payments to employes for their accumulated annual leave when they leave Federal service.

Area Picture Outlined

In and nearby this city, this is the picture of War Department employment and what it faces:

On May 1, there were 30,940 civilian employes here and nearby; 17,802 in the departmental service which includes headquarters employes in the Pentagon and other buildings in the city, and 13,138 in so-called field establishments here and nearby such as Bolling Field, Army Map Service, Fort Myer, and so forth.

In the reductions now under way, the departmental staff would be brought down to 16,254 on June 30, or the elimination of 1548 jobs, and the field force here and nearby would be sliced to about 12,000, or a cut of 1138 jobs. The two make a total of 2686 war jobs that will be definitely wiped out.

On top of these cuts, the House committee recommended that the departmental staff be cut down to 13,035 as of July 1 or an over-all slash since May 1 of 4767. In the field service here and nearby, officials estimate, a minimum of 2000 additional would have to be fired to get that force down to around 10,000. This would make an over-all cut in that group since May 1 of 3138.

In brief, if the House committee cuts are approved, the jobs of upwards of 7900 War employes in this area stand to be wiped out. Of course, it's a distinct possibility that some money will be restored to the department's budget, and also, that the department will decide to require its stations over the country to absorb a larger percentage of the cut than was recommended by the committee. In those events, the Washington staff wouldn't be as hard hit.

Over the entire world, the department urged the committee to allow it about half a million civilians for the 1948 fiscal year that begins on July 1. The committee recommended that these cuts be made:

Dropping 59,524 of the 344,644 in the so-called zone of the interior which covers most employes in this country; 11,041 out of the 110,420 slated for overseas assignments; 3548 of the 16,583 in the departmental service here; 518 of the 5186 in industrial mobilization work—and no cuts for the 18,201 in research and development.

According to the committee's figures, the slash would knock out a total of 74,631 jobs and bring total employment of the department down to 420,403 here and abroad.

But reductions now in progress will get the Department down to about 463,000 by June 30. And if committee cuts stand, about 45,000 more people would have to be fired.

In addition to the civilian cuts, the committee recommended that 20,100 officers and warrant officers be dropped—several thousand officers are stationed here. It recommended no reduction for officer nurses, dietitians, or physiotherapists.

The committee emphasized that no reduction was recommended among the 18,201 employes in research and development, or among the 30,000 producing Army supplies and equipment.

But where reductions must be made, the committee said that the same percentage should be made in each pay classification, unless there were too many high-paid people in a particular office.

This is an office-by-office cut as recommended by the committee for the departmental staff here:

SECRETARY OF WAR: 274 of the 1097 to be fired. CHIEF OF STAFF: 566 of 2264 jobs to go. ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE: A cut of 830 of the 4300 jobs. CHIEF OF FINANCE: 113 of the 565 jobs would be wiped out.

QUARTERMASTER GENERAL: 361 of its 1805 jobs are threatened.

INSPECTOR GENERAL: 15 of its 74 jobs would be knocked out.

JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL: No cut in its 160 jobs. TRANSPORTATION: Would lose 164 of its 820 jobs.

SIGNAL OFFICER: Cut would knock out 125 of 625 jobs. AIR FORCES: Slash threatens 426 of 1705 jobs here. SURGEON GENERAL: 69 of its 695 jobs threatened. ENGINEERS: 270 of its 1079 jobs. ORDNANCE: 260 of its 1040 jobs.

CHEMICAL CORPS: Thirty-two of its 129 jobs would go.

CHAPLAINS: No cut in its 35-man staff.

NATIONAL GUARD: No slash in 125-man staff.

PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL: Ten of its 50 employes would be fired.

SPECIAL SERVICES: Three of its 15 employes would be fired.

The actual numbers of employes now on duty in these offices are all considerably larger than the figures used by the committee. The cuts, if they go through, would be even larger than they appear.

Outside the District, the cuts would range from 10 to 50 per cent, the average would be around 17 per cent.

RETIREMENT: In a slam-bang Senate speech, Senator Williams (R., Del.) yesterday moved to recommit the Langer-Chavez retirement bill to the Civil Service Committee. He lost out on a point of order raised by Chairman Langer, but Williams served notice he would again make the motion when the bill is formally before the Senate.

Williams charged that the bill is designed to give special benefits to New Deal employes who will lose jobs in the GOP economy program. He said the bill was a "flagrant attempt to raid the Treasury," and that its passage would destroy the old-age security of every career employe. He also belittled the committee contention that the bill would cost the Government nothing.

COMMERCE: Its 150 employes in its Office of Export Control yesterday were given provisional 30-days notices.

TREASURY: James H. Hard, a Budget Bureau consultant and an able operator, yesterday was appointed personnel director of the Treasury Department. He succeeds likable Ted Wilson, who will retire.

REVENUE: The President yesterday ordered the Internal Revenue Bureau to transfer its Tobacco Tax Division from Greensboro, N. C., back to this city. About 35 of its 75 employes will return.

Coup Staged In Hungary

conveyed to the Government in a deposition from Bela Kovacs, former secretary general of the Small Landholders Party. Kovacs' arrest on February 26 precipitated a sharp United States note charging Communists with "attempting to seize power."

The political ax fell on Nagy after 17 months in office trying to uphold the moderately conservative beliefs of his party, which won 57 per cent of the vote in the last election, against the insistent demands of the Communists and their friends among the Social Democrats.

He survived the first Communist-inspired purge of his party in which 18 members resigned early in 1946 and subsequent purges when some members of the party were compelled to resign from parliament.

When he left for Switzerland May 14, his friends said he was going on a vacation, but reliable informants said it was the purpose of stalling or avoiding an anticipated Communist-created crisis in his government.

Nagy's political advisers said tonight his resignation would give an impetus to the Communist campaign to nationalize the national bank and three other leading banks which own 62 per cent of Hungarian industry.

Thirty per cent of the country's heavy industry already has been nationalized.

Near panic existed in Budapest's leading business circles tonight, and there was nervous talk of another inflation.

A visitor to the Associated Press office, who described himself as the premier's 'best friend" and who is known to this correspondent, asked that the following message be sent to Nagy:

"The Prime Minister's best friend in Hungary says for the Prime Minister to stay out of Hungary until he receives another message."

(Dispatches from Switzerland said Nagy left Locarno at noon in an automobile.)

A Hungarian source said two other high officials, Foreign Minister Janos Gyongyosy and Bela Varga, speaker of the House, both members of the Small Landholders Party, had been named in the Russian charges auong with Nagy.

Ferenc Capocs, private secretary to the premier, was arrested last night, the informant added, and his apartment searched by the Communist-dominated political police.

The departure of Nagy, who has been accused by some of his own party of showing weak-kneed opposition to some of the Communist tactics, left Deputy Premier Matyas Raskosi, a Communist, in charge of the government.

Kovacs was arrested February 26 by the Russians when all maneuvers failed to get a waiver of his parliamentary immunity so the Hungarian Communists could arrest him themselves. In reply to a series of sharp United States notes, Russian Lieut. Gen. V. P. Sviridov said Kovacs was a spy and charged the Americans with interfering in Hungarian affairs.

Seizure of power by the Communists in Hungary would cap an unusual series of maneuvers in that nation of nine million people.

In the general elections of November 4, 1945, the country gave the Small Landholders Party, a combination of small peasants and influential industrialists, 222 of the seats in the 420-member national assembly.

The Communists won only 70 seats but gained the sympathy of the Social Democrats, a majority of whom adopted a pro-Communist policy.

Rather than attempt to govern through his own party alone, Nagy gave four seats in his cabinet to Communists, two to Social Democrats and one to a National Peasant.

The Communists, through their control of the Department of Interior and the political department of the army, caused some members including small Landholders in parliament to resign. Arrests were reported to have totalled 3000.

U. S.-British Pact on Germany Is Answer to Moscow Failure

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The Anglo-American agreement announced in Berlin yesterday is the first major response by the western powers to the failure of the Moscow conference.

Informed officials here regard it as a sign that the United States and Britain are determined to make a success of their combined zones in western Germany.

Secretary of State George C. Marshall, speaking before he had seen the text of the final agreement, said yesterday he considered it very important, and was glad the long negotiations in Berlin had succeeded.

Official Washington does not fully share the optimism of Lord Pakenham, the British minister in charge of German affairs, who said at Essen on Sunday night that western Germany stood on "the threshold of a new era."

Chary of Predictions

American administrators certainly hope it will be a "new era" for the hungry and disorganized western zones, but they are chary of predictions until they can see how the new agreement will develop in practice.

Preliminary reports show that the new Economic Council will be a somewhat cumbersome machine. It will consist of 54 German members, chosen by the various states or laender on a basis of population and the proportionate strength of political parties at the last elections.

Under it will be an executive committee, with one representative from each land, to supervise the five German administrative departments which have now been centralized in one place, at Frankfort. The various states will be responsible for seeing that the directives of the Economic Council are carried out.

Agreement is Compromise

The agreement represents a compromise between British and American views. The British, for example, wanted a high degree of centralization; there were some demands in the London press for an actual provisional government of western Germany.

Both the British and American commanders in Berlin have made it clear that there will be no such western German government at this time.

The United States Government has always insisted on leaving the widest possible power to the individual states, even if this might mean less efficiency in administering western Germany as a whole.

The American negotiators in Berlin have fought hard, and apparently with success, to prevent a highly centralized regime which might some day confront the world with a new German menace.

Colossal Job Ahead

American officials are glad, however, that a council composed of Germans will now have the major responsibility for speeding exports, for producing more coal and for distributing food more fairly between the farms and the hungry city populations.

The job ahead of the new council is colossal. In the first three months of this year exports from the combined zones were running at an annual rate of only 124 million dollars, compared with a target figure of 350 million dollars for 1947.

Coal production in the Ruhr has slumped to 216,000 tons a day from the figure of 238,000 tons reached last month. Food stocks are so low, and distribution has been so poor, that in the first four months of this year the two occupying powers have had to bring a million and a half tons of food, seed and fertilizer into the two zones, at a cost of 163 million dollars to their taxpayers.

Area a Test Case

Nobody in authority pretends that the new council can solve all the appalling economic problems of western Germany. Americans and British alike are determined, however, to show that western Germany can live and thrive even without Soviet cooperation.

Since the end of the Moscow Conference western Germany has become a test case. If conditions improve, and if the combined zones can be made to work, both Governments feel there is a chance of winning Soviet and French cooperation later in the year.

U. S. Rushing Food

Berlin, May 29 (AP).—The American military government said tonight that food ships from the United States arrived at German ports during the first three weeks of this month at the rate of three every two days in the effort to relieve the German food shortage.

Col. Hugh B. Hester, chief of the AMG's food and agriculture branch, said that 32 American food ships arrived in Bremen, Hamburg and Emden during May 1 to 21 and discharged more than 200,000 tons of food valued at "approximately 30 million dollars."

Cast of Movie 'Mrs. Carrolls' Should Be Put on Milk Diet

By Leo Brady

On the stage, "The Two Mrs. Carrolls" was a clumsy, ill-written vehicle drawn by the one—and only—Elizabeth Bargne.. On the screen at the Earle—it becomes a fairly creepy, well-filmed melodrama marred chiefly by its performers.

Even though you may possibly keep at least one step ahead of Thomas Job's script—everybody knows a glass of milk is a lethal weapon by this time—you'll still have a nice, apprehensive time watching the menace gather. Provided, that is, you can put up with Humphrey Bogart, Barbara Stanwyck, Alexis Smith and a little girl with disconcertingly adult diction named Ann Carter.

Director Peter Godfrey dosen't make the usual movie mistake of just photographing a play. His camera does more than perform the function of opera glasses in the theater. And he and his script provide enough good shots, sound effects and tingling moments to add up to a respectable whole.

They Get Paid!

But the fact of the matter is that the technical side of the film tries o compensae for he difference between Bergner's talent and whatever it is that Bogart & Co. get paid to do. Thus, the bells of a cathedral ring wildly in an attempt to give you the same chill that Miss Bergner provides by looking furtively over her shoulder.

Warner Bros. apparently can't think of murder without also thinking of H. Bogart, with the consequence in this case that old deep-freeze face is in there trying to impersonate a charming husband. This is no go. Barbara Stanwyck gugs nicely while being strangled, but her other lines are painfully articuate. Alexis Smith is the wisest of the three—she doesn't struggle with her role. Just lets it die quietly on the parquet floor.

Ann Carter plays the daughter of the first Mrs. Carroll and is frighteningly precocious—even though she has a blind spot with regard to her father. This character is an innovation of the film and serves as a kind of moppet Greek chorus.

Good Script and Direction

The script and the direction have translated the story into good cinematic form. It builds slowly but with nicely paced acceleration toward its finish—weaving in standard murder paraphernalia, such as letters, allegedly comic servants, a blackmailer, cut telephone wires, banging windows—and, of course, that glass of milk. But there's no reason why all these stock—but effective—ingredients couldn't have been whipped up into an exieting picture. The Messrs. Godfrey and Job do an imaginative job—but the actors bog them down.

Isobel Elsom plays Alexis Smith's mother, Pat O'Moore is the guy Barbara should have married and Barry Bernard is a chemist who knows too much and gets hoist by his own pestle. All in all, where the stage play had a great actress and nothing else, the movie version has expert direction, an able script and acting that'll make you want to commit mayhem.

Bugs Bunny races a tortoise in a cartoon and Popular Science informs you about rockets to the moon.

Just by the way, it would be nice to see a killer who is not the victim of a mental quirk but just plain villainous—like Iago.

Court Action Begun on VA Hospital Site

From Yesterday's Late Editions

The first step toward condemnation of the Nevius tract in Arlington was taken by Attorney General's office yesterday. The 25-acre tract has been selected by the Veterans Administration as site of a hospital.

A. Devitt Vanesh, assistant attorney general in charge of the lands division, yesterday requested Harry H. Holt, jr., United States Attorney for the Eastern District at Richmond, Va., to file a condemnation petition with the District Court there.

Justice Department officials said as soon as the VA check for $850,827, Government appraisal value of the tract, is received here, it will be filed with the court. The department will then ask for immediate possession which, if uncontested, would enable VA to begin construction immediately, the justice spokesman said.

Principal owners of the rectangular tract, which is located between the Arlington National Cemetery, Lee blvd., and the Arlington Ridge rd., are Avon M. Nevius, retired Riggs National Bank official, 45 per cent; Clarence O. Sherrill, of Cincinnati, Ohio, 41.66 per cent; Willard A. Holbrook, jr., of Washington, 6.66 per cent; and the trustees of the estate of David S. Stanley, 6.66 per cent.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Pollard of Thomaston, Ga., Mattie Lou has studied in a one-room, one-teacher school since she began her schooling.

The Georgia girl won $500 and a trip to New York; Sonya got $300 for second place, and $100 went to Suzanne Gefin of Parma, Ohio, who misspelled "sarsaparilla."

The inscription on the tablet, bearing the signature of Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal, referred to Navy V-12 Medical and Dental Units.

Jewish Groups Vote to Merge Congregations

From Yesterday's Late Editions

Meeting separately in their own synagogues, members of three Jewish congregations voted unanimously last night to worship hereafter as a single group of about 1300 members.

As result, a joint committee representing the three groups will immediately proceed with plans for the construction of a single synagogue.

Each group will continue to worship in its synagogue until the new building is completed.

The synagogues and their spiritual leaders now are Tifereth Israel, 14th and Euclid sts. nw., Rabbi Harry Silverstone; Ohev Sholom, 5th and I sts. nw., Rabbi Zemach Green, and Agudath, Achim, 909 Quackenbos st. nw., Rabbi Herman J. Waldman.

Ohev Sholom, oldest and largest in membership of the three synagogues, was founded in 1887.

Tifereth Israel has had only two rabbis in its 40-year history—a father and a son. The late Rabbi Gedalia Silverstone, who served from 1907 to 1935, died two years ago in Palestine. Rabbi Harry Silverstone succeeded his father in 1935.

D. C. Guardsmen Training Program To Start Aug. 3

A two-week training program for National Guardsmen in the District will start August 3 at Fort Meade, Md.

Included among troops who will receive the training are members of the 260th AAA Gun Battalion. The training will include qualification firing of M-1 rifles, familiarization firing of carbine and pistols and training on artillery weapons.

Major G. W. Cleek, commanding officer, said yesterday that civil service employes, as well as employes of many civilian firms, will be granted military leave with no loss of pay or vacation to attend the training course.

D. C. Rent Control Faces Action in Senate Today

Senate action slated today on the national rent control extension bill may settle the future of District rent control.

Senate District Chairman C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.) said last night it was unlikely Congress would let rent control continue in Washington beyond the national deadline.

His bill before the Senate would end national and local controls the end of next February.

Washington's Commissioners have announced support for a House bill by Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.) to extend District rent control through the end of next year.

School Board Recommends 50 Million Federal Loan

cently this estimate was revised in terms of building costs to the higher figure.

The Corning report stated that for the last 10 years, the District has spent about two million dollars a year for new school buildings and sites.

A "fantastic" growth in population, a shifting of the population to new sections of the city, inadequate appropriations over the years, and wartime restrictions on building were listed by Corning as reason for the city's accumulated school needs.

As precedent for the loan, the Corning report pointed to the Capper-Cramton Act which authorized an appropriation of 16 million dollars for park areas and their improvement. The District is now repaying this sum.

Five "Urgent Reasons"

Corning outlined five "urgent" reasons for the building program. They are:

1. Nearly 7000 children are attending school half time in 20 buildings. Unless additional building facilities are provided 13 additional schools will go on part-time programs next year.

2. Children are now traveling great distances from newly developed areas where there are no schools.

3. Obsolete buildings where "standards of health, sanitation, ventilation, and lighting are disregarded and essential phases of the educational program must be omitted" are still in use. Many of these buildings were scheduled to be abandoned in 1908.

4. In the interest of economy sites should be acquired before and not after an area has been built up.

5. Recently constructed buildings, now occupied, have never been completed. "They lack essential features for the complete training of boys and girls," the report states.

Delay Termed Serious

Delay in the program is "very serious," Corning said.

"The education of children cannot be postponed. In most other public services if the new facility is not provided the population will suffer inconvenience, but in the case of schools the postponement of the providing of adequate facilities creates a lack which can never be supplied later."

Crowding in the schools also has resulted in "tensions and evidences of extreme unrest," the report states. "It is reasonable to expect that if these unsatisfactory school accommodations are permitted to continue tensions will grow more serious and unrest and conflict will result."

10.5-30% Tax Cut Agreed On

thereafter. Dropped without a struggle was the House provision dating the 10½ to 30 per cent cuts from January 1, 1947. As approved by the conferees, these rates would take effect July 1 on payroll withholdings, but when taxpayers made final returns next March they would be allowed only half-rate reductions on their full 1947 income.

House Wins Concession

House conferees, in turn, wrung one important concession from the Senate. They held out for, and won an extension of 20 per cent bracket cuts to incomes up to $137,000.

The House originally had voted a 20 per cent cut on taxable incomes between $1400 and $302,000. The Senate balked at the long 20 per cent range benefiting wealthy taxpayers. They made two steps out of the single House bracket, continuing the 20 per cent cut on incomes between $1400 and $80,000, but making the slash only 15 per cent on incomes between $80,000 and $302,000.

As revised in conference, taxes would be cut as follows:

On taxable incomes up to $1000—30 per cent cut.

On $1000 to $1400 incomes—cut graduated downward from 30 to 20 per cent.

On $1400 to $137,000 incomes—20 per cent cut.

On $137,000 to $302,000 incomes—15 per cent cut.

On incomes over $302,000—10½ per cent cut.

U. S., Britain Form Two-Zone Council for Rule in Germany

the two zones will have to be raised above the limits in the Potsdam Agreement, because of the failure of Germany and France to enter an economic union. Both Clay and Robertson have said it will.

Based on United Germany

Clay and Robertson renewed their invitation to France and Russia to join the economic merger.

The level of industry prescribed in the Potsdam declaration was based upon a united Germany—not a split nation.

Council members will be chosen from each state of the two zones, and an executive committee will be formed of representatives from the states. They will have day-to-day responsibility for coordinating the work of bizonal agencies in accordance with the council.

The five existing bizonal agencies—food and agriculture, finance, transport, communications and economics—will come under the general policies of the new council.

Mrs. Harrison said she had stopped because of traffic when she noticed the tree swaying.

The location, between O and P sts. nw., near Dupont Circle, slowed traffic until the tree was removed.

Other trees were reported down at 328 6th st. se., on East Capitol, between 11th and 12th sts., and at a number of locations in Arlington and Alexandria.

Alexandria police reported a wire down on Highway No. 1, near Potomac Yards, blocking traffic. Metropolitan police here reported other wires down at 4110 Ingomar st. nw.

The storm, the bureau said, was part of a general disturbance which has brought severe cold to the Rocky Mountain area and Midwest.

Mayflower Hotel Suit Dismissed

Justice Richmond B. Keech yesterday dismissed the suit brought by a minority group of stockholders in the Mayflower Hotel contesting its sale to the Hilton Hotels Corp.

The District Court suit had charged fraud, conspiracy and breach of fiduciary duty by various officials of Mayflower and Hilton.

In dismissing the suit, Justice Keech said:

"Complainant fails to state facts on which relief can be granted. The action with reference to the management agreement is premature, and interference at this juncture would amount to usurpation of managerial function. Especially is this apparent when the contract of sale is scrutinized in the light of the entire record before the court."

The safe was rifled. Company officials said the cash box, containing approximately $205 was missing.

Four Drowned As Barge Upsets

Norfolk, May 29 (AP).—Four employes of the Ballard Brothers Fish Co. at Cape Charles drowned yesterday afternoon when a barge loaded with oyster shells overturned at the mouth of King's Creek, on the Eastern Shore, it was learned here today.

According to C. E. Ballard of Cheriton, the barge was being towed by a fishing boat when it suddenly overturned, throwing the seven men aboard it into the water. The barge did not sink. Three of the men could swim, and were saved, but the other four disappeared.

The men were identified by Ballard as William Parks, Charlie Carter, George Mason and Isaac Harris. All lived near Cheriton.

time an employe is notified of dismissal and removal from the rolls.

However, it was explained that in case of emergency it isn't necessary for employes to be on active duty the entire 30 days. In any event, it's impossible for the Department to get out the new notices and give the employes 30 days notice before June 30.

Now there's a move on to get the tentative notices between June 15 and July 1, but to try to get Congress to permit the Department to use 1947 funds to pay the terminal leave bill.

Under the law, 1947 money can't be used after July 1 when 1948 funds become available. If the costly annual leave must be paid out of 1948 appropriations, an even greater number of employes must be fired to offset the cost. The law requires agencies to make lump sum payments to employes for their accumulated annual leave when they leave Federal service.

Area Picture Outlined

In and nearby this city, this is the picture of War Department employment and what it faces:

On May 1, there were 30,940 civilian employes here and nearby; 17,802 in the departmental service which includes headquarters employes in the Pentagon and other buildings in the city, and 13,138 in so-called field establishments here and nearby such as Bolling Field, Army Map Service, Fort Myer, and so forth.

In the reductions now under way, the departmental staff would be brought down to 16,254 on June 30, or the elimination of 1548 jobs, and the field force here and nearby would be sliced to about 12,000, or a cut of 1138 jobs. The two make a total of 2686 war jobs that will be definitely wiped out.

On top of these cuts, the House committee recommended that the departmental staff be cut down to 13,035 as of July 1 or an over-all slash since May 1 of 4767. In the field service here and nearby, officials estimate, a minimum of 2000 additional would have to be fired to get that force down to around 10,000. This would make an over-all cut in that group since May 1 of 3138.

In brief, if the House committee cuts are approved, the jobs of upwards of 7900 War employes in this area stand to be wiped out. Of course, it's a distinct possibility that some money will be restored to the department's budget, and also, that the department will decide to require its stations over the country to absorb a larger percentage of the cut than was recommended by the committee. In those events, the Washington staff wouldn't be as hard hit.

Over the entire world, the department urged the committee to allow it about half a million civilians for the 1948 fiscal year that begins on July 1. The committee recommended that these cuts be made:

Dropping 59,524 of the 344,644 in the so-called zone of the interior which covers most employes in this country; 11,041 out of the 110,420 slated for overseas assignments; 3548 of the 16,583 in the departmental service here; 518 of the 5186 in industrial mobilization work—and no cuts for the 18,201 in research and development.

According to the committee's figures, the slash would knock out a total of 74,631 jobs and bring total employment of the department down to 420,403 here and abroad.

But reductions now in progress will get the Department down to about 463,000 by June 30. And if committee cuts stand, about 45,000 more people would have to be fired.

In addition to the civilian cuts, the committee recommended that 20,100 officers and warrant officers be dropped—several thousand officers are stationed here. It recommended no reduction for officer nurses, dietitians, or physiotherapists.

The committee emphasized that no reduction was recommended among the 18,201 employes in research and development, or among the 30,000 producing Army supplies and equipment.

But where reductions must be made, the committee said that the same percentage should be made in each pay classification, unless there were too many high-paid people in a particular office.

This is an office-by-office cut as recommended by the committee for the departmental staff here:

SECRETARY OF WAR: 274 of the 1097 to be fired. CHIEF OF STAFF: 566 of 2264 jobs to go. ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE: A cut of 830 of the 4300 jobs. CHIEF OF FINANCE: 113 of the 565 jobs would be wiped out.

QUARTERMASTER GENERAL: 361 of its 1805 jobs are threatened.

INSPECTOR GENERAL: 15 of its 74 jobs would be knocked out.

JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL: No cut in its 160 jobs. TRANSPORTATION: Would lose 164 of its 820 jobs.

SIGNAL OFFICER: Cut would knock out 125 of 625 jobs. AIR FORCES: Slash threatens 426 of 1705 jobs here. SURGEON GENERAL: 69 of its 695 jobs threatened. ENGINEERS: 270 of its 1079 jobs. ORDNANCE: 260 of its 1040 jobs.

CHEMICAL CORPS: Thirty-two of its 129 jobs would go.

CHAPLAINS: No cut in its 35-man staff.

NATIONAL GUARD: No slash in 125-man staff.

PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL: Ten of its 50 employes would be fired.

SPECIAL SERVICES: Three of its 15 employes would be fired.

The actual numbers of employes now on duty in these offices are all considerably larger than the figures used by the committee. The cuts, if they go through, would be even larger than they appear.

Outside the District, the cuts would range from 10 to 50 per cent, the average would be around 17 per cent.

RETIREMENT: In a slam-bang Senate speech, Senator Williams (R., Del.) yesterday moved to recommit the Langer-Chavez retirement bill to the Civil Service Committee. He lost out on a point of order raised by Chairman Langer, but Williams served notice he would again make the motion when the bill is formally before the Senate.

Williams charged that the bill is designed to give special benefits to New Deal employes who will lose jobs in the GOP economy program. He said the bill was a "flagrant attempt to raid the Treasury," and that its passage would destroy the old-age security of every career employe. He also belittled the committee contention that the bill would cost the Government nothing.

COMMERCE: Its 150 employes in its Office of Export Control yesterday were given provisional 30-days notices.

TREASURY: James H. Hard, a Budget Bureau consultant and an able operator, yesterday was appointed personnel director of the Treasury Department. He succeeds likable Ted Wilson, who will retire.

REVENUE: The President yesterday ordered the Internal Revenue Bureau to transfer its Tobacco Tax Division from Greensboro, N. C., back to this city. About 35 of its 75 employes will return.

Coup Staged In Hungary

conveyed to the Government in a deposition from Bela Kovacs, former secretary general of the Small Landholders Party. Kovacs' arrest on February 26 precipitated a sharp United States note charging Communists with "attempting to seize power."

The political ax fell on Nagy after 17 months in office trying to uphold the moderately conservative beliefs of his party, which won 57 per cent of the vote in the last election, against the insistent demands of the Communists and their friends among the Social Democrats.

He survived the first Communist-inspired purge of his party in which 18 members resigned early in 1946 and subsequent purges when some members of the party were compelled to resign from parliament.

When he left for Switzerland May 14, his friends said he was going on a vacation, but reliable informants said it was the purpose of stalling or avoiding an anticipated Communist-created crisis in his government.

Nagy's political advisers said tonight his resignation would give an impetus to the Communist campaign to nationalize the national bank and three other leading banks which own 62 per cent of Hungarian industry.

Thirty per cent of the country's heavy industry already has been nationalized.

Near panic existed in Budapest's leading business circles tonight, and there was nervous talk of another inflation.

A visitor to the Associated Press office, who described himself as the premier's 'best friend" and who is known to this correspondent, asked that the following message be sent to Nagy:

"The Prime Minister's best friend in Hungary says for the Prime Minister to stay out of Hungary until he receives another message."

(Dispatches from Switzerland said Nagy left Locarno at noon in an automobile.)

A Hungarian source said two other high officials, Foreign Minister Janos Gyongyosy and Bela Varga, speaker of the House, both members of the Small Landholders Party, had been named in the Russian charges auong with Nagy.

Ferenc Capocs, private secretary to the premier, was arrested last night, the informant added, and his apartment searched by the Communist-dominated political police.

The departure of Nagy, who has been accused by some of his own party of showing weak-kneed opposition to some of the Communist tactics, left Deputy Premier Matyas Raskosi, a Communist, in charge of the government.

Kovacs was arrested February 26 by the Russians when all maneuvers failed to get a waiver of his parliamentary immunity so the Hungarian Communists could arrest him themselves. In reply to a series of sharp United States notes, Russian Lieut. Gen. V. P. Sviridov said Kovacs was a spy and charged the Americans with interfering in Hungarian affairs.

Seizure of power by the Communists in Hungary would cap an unusual series of maneuvers in that nation of nine million people.

In the general elections of November 4, 1945, the country gave the Small Landholders Party, a combination of small peasants and influential industrialists, 222 of the seats in the 420-member national assembly.

The Communists won only 70 seats but gained the sympathy of the Social Democrats, a majority of whom adopted a pro-Communist policy.

Rather than attempt to govern through his own party alone, Nagy gave four seats in his cabinet to Communists, two to Social Democrats and one to a National Peasant.

The Communists, through their control of the Department of Interior and the political department of the army, caused some members including small Landholders in parliament to resign. Arrests were reported to have totalled 3000.

U. S.-British Pact on Germany Is Answer to Moscow Failure

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The Anglo-American agreement announced in Berlin yesterday is the first major response by the western powers to the failure of the Moscow conference.

Informed officials here regard it as a sign that the United States and Britain are determined to make a success of their combined zones in western Germany.

Secretary of State George C. Marshall, speaking before he had seen the text of the final agreement, said yesterday he considered it very important, and was glad the long negotiations in Berlin had succeeded.

Official Washington does not fully share the optimism of Lord Pakenham, the British minister in charge of German affairs, who said at Essen on Sunday night that western Germany stood on "the threshold of a new era."

Chary of Predictions

American administrators certainly hope it will be a "new era" for the hungry and disorganized western zones, but they are chary of predictions until they can see how the new agreement will develop in practice.

Preliminary reports show that the new Economic Council will be a somewhat cumbersome machine. It will consist of 54 German members, chosen by the various states or laender on a basis of population and the proportionate strength of political parties at the last elections.

Under it will be an executive committee, with one representative from each land, to supervise the five German administrative departments which have now been centralized in one place, at Frankfort. The various states will be responsible for seeing that the directives of the Economic Council are carried out.

Agreement is Compromise

The agreement represents a compromise between British and American views. The British, for example, wanted a high degree of centralization; there were some demands in the London press for an actual provisional government of western Germany.

Both the British and American commanders in Berlin have made it clear that there will be no such western German government at this time.

The United States Government has always insisted on leaving the widest possible power to the individual states, even if this might mean less efficiency in administering western Germany as a whole.

The American negotiators in Berlin have fought hard, and apparently with success, to prevent a highly centralized regime which might some day confront the world with a new German menace.

Colossal Job Ahead

American officials are glad, however, that a council composed of Germans will now have the major responsibility for speeding exports, for producing more coal and for distributing food more fairly between the farms and the hungry city populations.

The job ahead of the new council is colossal. In the first three months of this year exports from the combined zones were running at an annual rate of only 124 million dollars, compared with a target figure of 350 million dollars for 1947.

Coal production in the Ruhr has slumped to 216,000 tons a day from the figure of 238,000 tons reached last month. Food stocks are so low, and distribution has been so poor, that in the first four months of this year the two occupying powers have had to bring a million and a half tons of food, seed and fertilizer into the two zones, at a cost of 163 million dollars to their taxpayers.

Area a Test Case

Nobody in authority pretends that the new council can solve all the appalling economic problems of western Germany. Americans and British alike are determined, however, to show that western Germany can live and thrive even without Soviet cooperation.

Since the end of the Moscow Conference western Germany has become a test case. If conditions improve, and if the combined zones can be made to work, both Governments feel there is a chance of winning Soviet and French cooperation later in the year.

U. S. Rushing Food

Berlin, May 29 (AP).—The American military government said tonight that food ships from the United States arrived at German ports during the first three weeks of this month at the rate of three every two days in the effort to relieve the German food shortage.

Col. Hugh B. Hester, chief of the AMG's food and agriculture branch, said that 32 American food ships arrived in Bremen, Hamburg and Emden during May 1 to 21 and discharged more than 200,000 tons of food valued at "approximately 30 million dollars."

Cast of Movie 'Mrs. Carrolls' Should Be Put on Milk Diet

By Leo Brady

On the stage, "The Two Mrs. Carrolls" was a clumsy, ill-written vehicle drawn by the one—and only—Elizabeth Bargne:. On the screen at the Earle—it becomes a fairly creepy, well-filmed melodrama marred chiefly by its performers.

Even though you may possibly keep at least one step ahead of Thomas Job's script—everybody knows a glass of milk is a lethal weapon by this time—you'll still have a nice, apprehensive time watching the menace gather. Provided, that is, you can put up with Humphrey Bogart, Barbara Stanwyck, Alexis Smith and a little girl with disconcertingly adult diction named Ann Carter.

Director Peter Godfrey dosen't make the usual movie mistake of just photographing a play. His camera does more than perform the function of opera glasses in the theater. And he and his script provide enough good shots, sound effects and tingling moments to add up to a respectable whole.

They Get Paid!

But the fact of the matter is that the technical side of the film tries o compensae for he difference between Bergner's talent and whatever it is that Bogart & Co. get paid to do. Thus, the bells of a cathedral ring wildly in an attempt to give you the same chill that Miss Bergner provides by looking furtively over her shoulder.

Warner Bros. apparently can't think of murder without also thinking of H. Bogart, with the consequence in this case that old deep-freeze face is in there trying to impersonate a charming husband. This is no go. Barbara Stanwyck glugs nicely while being strangled, but her other lines are painfully articuate. Alexis Smith is the wisest of the three—she doesn't struggle with her role. Just lets it die quietly on the parquet floor.

Ann Carter plays the daughter of the first Mrs. Carroll and is frighteningly precocious—even though she has a blind spot with regard to her father. This character is an innovation of the film and serves as a kind of moppet Greek chorus.

Good Script and Direction

The script and the direction have translated the story into good cinematic form. It builds slowly but with nicely paced acceleration toward its finish—weaving in standard murder paraphernalia, such as letters, allegedly comic servants, a blackmailer, cut telephone wires, banging windows—and, of course, that glass of milk. But there's no reason why all these stock—but effective—ingredients couldn't have been whipped up into an exicting picture. The Messrs. Godfrey and Job do an imaginative job—but the actors bog them down.

Isobel Elsom plays Alexis Smith's mother, Pat O'Moore is the guy Barbara should have married and Barry Bernard is a chemist who knows too much and gets hoist by his own pestle. All in all, where the stage play had a great actress and nothing else, the movie version has expert direction, an able script and acting that'll make you want to commit mayhem.

Bugs Bunny races a tortoise in a cartoon and Popular Science informs you about rockets to the moon.

Just by the way, it would be nice to see a killer who is not the victim of a mental quirk but just plain villainous—like Iago.

Court Action Begun on VA Hospital Site

From Yesterday's Late Editions

The first step toward condemnation of the Nevius tract in Arlington was taken by Attorney General's office yesterday. The 25-acre tract has been selected by the Veterans Administration as site of a hospital.

A. Devitt Vanesh, assistant attorney general in charge of the lands division, yesterday requested Harry H. Holt, jr., United States Attorney for the Eastern District at Richmond, Va., to file a condemnation petition with the District Court there.

Justice Department officials said as soon as the VA check for $850,827, Government appraisal value of the tract, is received here, it will be filed with the court. The department will then ask for immediate possession which, if uncontested, would enable VA to begin construction immediately, the justice spokesman said.

Principal owners of the rectangular tract, which is located between the Arlington National Cemetery, Lee blvd., and the Arlington Ridge rd., are Avon M. Nevius, retired Riggs National Bank official, 45 per cent; Clarence O. Sherrill, of Cincinnati, Ohio, 41.66 per cent; Willard A. Holbrook, jr., of Washington, 6.66 per cent; and the trustees of the estate of David S. Stanley, 6.66 per cent.

Jewish Groups Vote to Merge Congregations

From Yesterday's Late Editions

Meeting separately in their own synagogues, members of three Jewish congregations voted unanimously last night to worship hereafter as a single group of about 1300 members.

As result, a joint committee representing the three groups will immediately proceed with plans for the construction of a single synagogue.

Each group will continue to worship in its synagogue until the new building is completed.

The synagogues and their spiritual leaders now are Tifereth Israel, 14th and Euclid sts. nw., Rabbi Harry Silverstone; Ohev Sholom, 5th and I sts. nw., Rabbi Zemach Green, and Agudath, Achim, 909 Quackenbos st. nw., Rabbi Herman J. Waldman.

Ohev Sholom, oldest and largest in membership of the three synagogues, was founded in 1887.

Tifereth Israel has had only two rabbis in its 40-year history—a father and a son. The late Rabbi Gedalia Silverstone, who served from 1907 to 1935, died two years ago in Palestine. Rabbi Harry Silverstone succeeded his father in 1935.

D. C. Guardsmen Training Program To Start Aug. 3

A two-week training program for National Guardsmen in the District will start August 3 at Fort Meade, Md.

Included among troops who will receive the training are members of the 260th AAA Gun Battalion. The training will include qualification firing of M-1 rifles, familiarization firing of carbine and pistols and training on artillery weapons.

Major G. W. Cleek, commanding officer, said yesterday that civil service employes, as well as employes of many civilian firms, will be granted military leave with no loss of pay or vacation to attend the training course.

D. C. Rent Control Faces Action in Senate Today

Senate action slated today on the national rent control extension bill may settle the future of District rent control.

Senate District Chairman C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.) said last night it was unlikely Congress would let rent control continue in Washington beyond the national deadline.

His bill before the Senate would end national and local controls the end of next February.

Washington's Commissioners have announced support for a House bill by Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.) to extend District rent control through the end of next year.

All three on the witness stand repudiated their confessions in whole or in part, with Harris and Hall asserting that they had been starved and beaten into signing. Harris disclaimed any knowledge of the crime, while the other two asserted he had coerced them into going with him for the purpose of "selling the gun."

School Board Recommends 50 Million Federal Loan

cently this estimate was revised in terms of building costs to the higher figure.

The Corning report stated that for the last 10 years, the District has spent about two million dollars a year for new school buildings and sites.

A "fantastic" growth in population, a shifting of the population to new sections of the city, inadequate appropriations over the years, and wartime restrictions on building were listed by Corning as reason for the city's accumulated school needs.

As precedent for the loan, the Corning report pointed to the Capper-Cramton Act which authorized an appropriation of 16 million dollars for park areas and their improvement. The District is now repaying this sum.

Five "Urgent Reasons"

Corning outlined five "urgent" reasons for the building program. They are:

1. Nearly 7000 children are attending school half time in 20 buildings. Unless additional building facilities are provided 13 additional schools will go on part-time programs next year.

2. Children are now traveling great distances from newly developed areas where there are no schools.

3. Obsolete buildings where "standards of health, sanitation, ventilation, and lighting are disregarded and essential phases of the educational program must be omitted" are still in use. Many of these buildings were scheduled to be abandoned in 1908.

4. In the interest of economy sites should be acquired before and not after an area has been built up.

5. Recently constructed buildings, now occupied, have never been completed. "They lack essential features for the complete training of boys and girls," the report states.

Delay Termed Serious

Delay in the program is "very serious," Corning said.

"The education of children cannot be postponed. In most other public services if the new facility is not provided the population will suffer inconvenience, but in the case of schools the postponement of the providing of adequate facilities creates a slack which can never be supplied later."

Crowding in the schools also has resulted in "tensions and evidences of extreme unrest," the report states. "It is reasonable to expect that if these unsatisfactory school accommodations are permitted to continue tensions will grow more serious and unrest and conflict will result."

10.5-30% Tax Cut Agreed On

thereafter. Dropped without a struggle was the House provision dating the 10½ to 30 per cent cuts from January 1, 1947. As approved by the conferees, these rates would take effect July 1 on payroll withholdings, but when taxpayers made final returns next March they would be allowed only half-rate reductions on their full 1947 income.

House Wins Concession

House conferees, in turn, wrung one important concession from the Senate. They held out for, and won an extension of 20 per cent bracket cuts to incomes up to $137,000.

The House originally had voted a 20 per cent cut on taxable incomes between $1400 and $302,000. The Senate balked at the long 20 per cent range benefiting wealthy taxpayers. They made two steps out of the single House bracket, continuing the 20 per cent cut on incomes between $1400 and $80,000, but making the slash only 15 per cent on incomes between $80,000 and $302,000.

As revised in conference, taxes would be cut as follows:

On taxable incomes up to $1000—30 per cent cut.

On $1000 to $1400 incomes—cut graduated downward from 30 to 20 per cent.

On $1400 to $137,000 incomes—20 per cent cut.

On $137,000 to $302,000 incomes—15 per cent cut.

On incomes over $302,000—10½ per cent cut.

U. S., Britain Form Two-Zone Council for Rule in Germany

the two zones will have to be raised above the limits in the Potsdam Agreement, because of the failure of Germany and France to enter an economic union. Both Clay and Robertson have said it will.

Based on United Germany

Clay and Robertson renewed their invitation to France and Russia to join the economic merger.

The level of industry prescribed in the Potsdam declaration was based upon a united Germany—not a split nation.

Council members will be chosen from each state of the two zones, and an executive committee will be formed of representatives from the states. They will have day-to-day responsibility for coordinating the work of bizonal agencies in accordance with the council.

The five existing bizonal agencies—food and agriculture, finance, transport, communications and economics—will come under the general policies of the new council.

Mayflower Hotel Suit Dismissed

Justice Richmond B. Keech yesterday dismissed the suit brought by a minority group of stockholders in the Mayflower Hotel contesting its sale to the Hilton Hotels Corp.

The District Court suit had charged fraud, conspiracy and breach of fiduciary duty by various officials of Mayflower and Hilton.

In dismissing the suit, Justice Keech said:

"Complainant fails to state facts on which relief can be granted. The action with reference to the management agreement is premature, and interference at this juncture would amount to usurpation of managerial function. Especially is this apparent when the contract of sale is scrutinized in the light of the entire record before the court."

Four Drowned As Barge Upsets

Norfolk, May 29 (AP).—Four employes of the Ballard Brothers Fish Co. at Cape Charles drowned yesterday afternoon when a barge loaded with oyster shells overturned at the mouth of King's Creek, on the Eastern Shore, it was learned here today.

According to C. E. Ballard of Cheriton, the barge was being towed by a fishing boat when it suddenly overturned, throwing the seven men aboard it into the water. The barge did not sink. Three of the men could swim, and were saved, but the other four disappeared.

The men were identified by Ballard as William Parks, Charlie Carter, George Mason and Isaac Harris. All lived near Cheriton.

Fascism

The most generous thing that can be said of the House Un-American Activities Subcommittee's decision not to worry about fascism in the United States is that it is abysmally naive. Two members of the three-man subcommittee devoted fully 10 minutes in arriving at the conclusion that there is no need for alarm over resurgence of fascist-type organizations in this country. It would be interesting to know how the committee disposed of such annoyances as the revitalized Ku Klux Klan and the Columbians, not to mention the host of ugly prejudices that are being assiduously incited and paraded. Perhaps the answer lies in the committee's sour observation that the pressure for investigation of native Fascists comes from Communists. That contention is absurd on the face of it, but even if it were true, would that make fascism any more desirable?

If this were the only instance of congressional blindness to fascism while the campaign against the Communists is being whooped up, it could be ascribed to just another of the Un-American Activities Committee's many aberrations. Unfortunately that is not the case. The House Administration Committee, for instance, is still contriving to squelch publication of the pamphlet Fascism in Action, which was prepared as a companion to the widely distributed Communism in Action. The Subcommittee on Printing reported the resolution out without a recommendation, a departure from the usual procedure, and now the Administration Committee proposes to hold hearings when it gets around to them, an equally unique departure on a matter of this sort.

The effect of this suppression is to give credence to the belief that a Red scare is all that Congress is interested in. All varieties of un-American philosophy, all forms of totalitarianism, should be its concern. The smell of this distortion is bad enough to warrant the Republican leadership taking a hand in the matter.

Restless Memorial

Some of our war dead have not yet achieved the peace they deserve on this Memorial Day. In Europe and in the Pacific the neat, well-kept cemeteries are spots of dignified beauty, honored today by the grateful inhabitants of the countries and islets that contain them. There are plans afoot to make these green plots more stately, by landscaping them and adding permanent gravestones to replace the white crosses. Meanwhile the work for the magnificently conceived Pacific War Memorial goes forward. This is a living commemoration of the sacrifices of our soldiers and sailors through a broad program of conservation and research in the Pacific areas. But there are disquieting influences afoot on this Memorial Day which mar these hallowing tributes. Thousands of families have received formal queries from the War Department asking whether they wish the bodies of their loved ones returned to this country. Already, it is reported, the sacred ground bought so dearly at Tarawa has been stripped of the men who fell there. Undoubtedly the same lugubrious process will soon be repeated elsewhere, though the shortage of coffins may prolong the sorrowful stream of returning dead for several years.

No one can presume to question the rights of parents and relatives to exercise their discretion in so delicate a matter. Their views should be respected. But alongside the families for whom the choice is readily determined there are thousands of others for whom the decision is cruel. Instinct dictates that the dead should stay where they fell, but outside pressures are working against it. Also the next of kin must wrestle with uncertainty. Are the bones sealed in the seamless steel caskets merely the mangled remains of the men who went away? Who can even be sure that identification has been positively established from the torn remnants of battle? Parents of Navy dead have a far less torturing role, for the dead who are buried at sea are beyond doubt and disturbance.

It is to these people on whom the decision rests heavily that Congress owes a responsibility—a responsibility ignored in the rush to bring the dead home. That responsibility can be met in part by enacting President Truman's suggestion that next of kin electing to leave the bodies abroad be granted funds to visit overseas cemeteries. Even more humane would be to add a provision that relatives can make such a trip before they are called upon to decide. We feel certain that anyone who looks upon the honor lavished on the graves by foreigners and American caretakers alike will realize that the cemeteries have become a part of the immortal scene of their sacrifice. We believe that the bereaved will be consoled by an overwhelming conclusion that this is the way it was meant to be, and that anything which disturbs the comradeship of the dead delays the peace they fought to find.

Up To The President

The tax-reduction bill now being whipped into final shape by House and Senate conferees is unacceptable, (1) because Congress has voted to cut revenues in advance of final action on important appropriations bills, (2) because tax reduction at this juncture would add to the existing inflationary pressure on prices by putting additional purchasing power in the hands of the people, (3) because what Senator Magnuson aptly calls "piecemeal nibblings" at our tax structure may well destroy "our present golden opportunity of achieving a complete overhauling of the tax structure," (4) because it is a virtual certainty that large Government expenditures will be required within the near future to implement our foreign policy.

The first three arguments against immediate tax reduction have been elaborated in considerable detail and defended most convincingly by the President, the Secretary of the Treasury and their followers in Congress. But the fourth objection has received comparatively little attention, although, in our opinion, it is the most important reason of all for postponing action on tax reduction. That is also the opinion of Senator Cooper of Kentucky, one of three Republicans opposed to the tax-reduction bill. He pointed out that we might be called upon to make large outlays during the present and the coming fiscal years to help the nations of western Europe restore their shattered economies. He noted that Congress had already voted to spend up to 750 million dollars for aid to Greece and Turkey and other European countries, and that President Hoover had stressed the need for continuing large outlays to promote a healthy world economy and eventually free us from the necessity of draining our resources for mere subsistence purposes without accomplishing any positive rehabilitation.

Mr. Cooper regretted the failure of the Administration to supply Congress and the country with more definite information as to the demands likely to be made upon us. We think his criticism well taken. For even if it is impossible to foresee the full extent of such demands at this time, it is certainly feasible to indicate the approximate over-all cost of a program that would facilitate European recovery. By adopting a cautious approach, asking only for limited sums for specific overseas relief programs, the Administration has made it easy for Congress to ignore the effect on future budgets of the kind of rehabilitation program that is clearly required.

We do not doubt that some members of Congress have voted for immediate tax reduction for the express purpose of raising obstacles to future outlays on foreign account. But motives aside, there is no denying that application of budgetary surpluses to tax reduction will militate against a generous foreign relief policy that might result in a reversion to deficit financing unless taxes were raised again. It is a long sight easier to cut taxes than to increase them. And we do not believe that Congress would consent to do so, as the price of implementing our foreign policies. Nor do we believe that Congress would knowingly consent to unbalance the budget again in order to make loans, or gifts to needy foreign countries.

If these assumptions are correct, a vote for tax reduction now is equivalent to a vote against foreign relief requests at a later date. That is certainly Senator Cooper's view of the matter, for he said significantly: "It seems to me . . . if I vote for the pending measure I shall have limited, perhaps precluded, the vote that I would want to give if these grave issues of international responsibility arise in the next fiscal year. It is idle to talk of peace, and our adherence to a world order, unless we are willing this year to make some sacrifice in terms of money to support it."

Even if the Administration were prepared to waive all the other strong objections to premature tax cutting, it cannot afford to ignore the threat to its foreign program implicit in the tax-reduction bill. Since the Senate vote indicates that a veto would not be overridden, we hope the President will refuse to sign the tax-reduction bill.

Greece: A Program

Rumblings of official uncertainty over the organization of the aid to Greece program are emanating from the State Department. A suggestion has been made that the problem of restoring Greece to a self-supporting basis might be solved by following the methods that we adopted to expand industrial output during the war. It seems to us that the proposal is worthy of consideration, in view of the extraordinary success that attended our own efforts. In the first place, the plan emphasizes the paramount importance of making sure that our dollars will not be wasted by planners who are more interested in securing quick results than in shoring up the country's productive system. In the second place, it calls for an organizational procedure that is presumably familiar to the Americans who will be selected to supervise the Greek aid program.

The fact that the War Production Board and the Civilian Production Administration were set up to further the war production efforts of a large and rich nation and were operated on a scale beside which the Greek rehabilitation program seems puny is immaterial. Indeed, the smaller scale of the Greek undertaking would contribute to its success. The objectives in both cases are, moreover, similar: to utilize scarce materials in ways that will contribute most to the attainment of maximum production.

Greece, too, needs to adopt a system of priorities that will enable her to satisfy essential needs first. That calls for a systematic survey to determine the order of urgency and plans for conserving and allocating scarce materials. With such an overall program as a guide, the amount and character of imports could be more effectively controlled and waste avoided. A Greek organization modeled after the WPB and the CPA might also promote a domestic expansion program designed to increase peacetime production of essential commodities. It would be easy to expand its operations, moreover, to cover the more important branches of agriculture.

Another argument for this proposal is that the organizational pattern affords an opportunity for utilizing the services of Americans who have acquired the experience needed to launch it in a hard school. A trained personnel recruited from our defunct war-control agencies would insure prompter action and fewer mistakes in setting up a supervisory system for Greece than would otherwise be possible. With so many strong points in its favor, we conclude that the proposal for a Greek Production Board has much to commend it.

Nicaragua And Bolivia

Exactly what displeased Nicaragua's strong man, Anastasio Somoza, over the regime of his protege, Leonardo Arguello, is not entirely clear from the news dispatches from Managua. It may be that Arguello had shown too much independence to suit Somoza. In his 26 days in office, Arguello, it is said, was intent upon putting his own men in the places occupied by Somoza's stooges. The irony of the situation is that the presidential election which put Arguello in office was held up as a model of a free and open election. The fresh coup shows it was nothing of the sort. Somoza, who had run the country since 1936, and who had attained an unpleasant notoriety among the Nicaraguans, fixed the election from behind the scenes, using all the tricks that used to be common practice of ward bosses here. He has now added farce to irony by getting the Nicaraguan Congress to declare Arguello "unfit" and to name Benjamin Lacayo Sacasa Acting President.

How different the experience in Bolivia! After the overthrow of the bloody Villaroel, with whom our State Department persevered so long, elections were called, the contenders being Enrique Hertzog and Luis Fernando Guachella, former Ambassador in Washington. Hertzog won by a close margin, and there was no aftermath of dissension. Not only did his adversary not contest the election; he agreed to serve in a cabinet of national unity as Minister of Foreign Affairs. He has just taken up that post, and all his many friends in the Capital will wish him success, as well as compliment him on his sportsmanship. Bolivia has undergone so much tribulation of late years that this turn in her political fortunes is occasion for felicitation.

Soon the Nicaraguan perversion of the will of the people will be presented to the American republics for countersignature. In the past such coups as the one at Managua have been given recognition by a sort of bandwagon rush. Some neighbor takes the lead, and then the rest follow suit. For some time we have pleaded for the development of uniform procedure on recognition on the part of the American republics which will insure common action. A reminder of such a step is appropriate in view of what is happening in Nicaragua. Only by the development of common practice toward changed regimes can the Bolivian model be fomented.

Communist Veterans

During the war, risk of life made no distinction as to political belief. All Americans in combat, whether they were Republicans, Communists, Democrats or anarchists, were subjected to the same perils. By the same token, honorable service in the armed forces was honorable service regardless of the political affiliation of the men who performed it. Yet Representative William J. Crow now would discriminate as to the quality of that service. He has introduced a bill to deny veterans' benefits, including the GI Bill of Rights, to all members of the Communist Party or to veterans "in sympathy with the general aims of the Communist Party."

This, in our opinion, is a vicious move. Aside from the question of legality or the even more dubious question of enforcement, it does violence to the principle of freedom of thought. The bill is one that casts dishonor on all military service, and as such it should be resented by all veterans' organizations, whatever their creed. Communists were accepted on the same terms as others when we needed men. Nor is it illegal to be a Communist. Abhorrent as are the Communist philosophy and tactics, we have not succumbed to the pressure to proscribe the Communist Party, nor should we. That would be the surest way to promote martyrdom and thus actually further the Communist ends. The same may be said of the Crow bill. It is an example of the way in which our extremists ignore principle in attempting to stampede Americans into losing their balance. In truth, the most frightening thing about the Communists is not so much what they can do to us, but what we can do to ourselves if we listen to the counsels of the witch-hunters.

"Gun Toting"

Your editorial of May 18 "Gun-Toting", makes a worth-while and practical suggestion when it recommends the appointment of a select committee to draft more effective legislation for the control of firearms in the District of Columbia.

Everyone acquainted with the operation of the present law realizes how far short it falls of providing any effective control over the purchase, carrying or possession of firearms. As a matter of fact, at present there is no law whatever dealing with who may possess a revolver, pistol or silencer.

What is less understandable is the fact that anyone may purchase a firearm in the District of Columbia except "a person who is not of sound mind, a drug addict, convicted of a crime of violence, or under the age of 18." The prospective purchaser need only make the dealer believe that he has some plausible reason for its acquisition. The only function of the police connected with the purchase of firearms is to make sure that the dealers report and that their reports are duly filed.

Moreover, the present law has been pretty much of a dead letter in effectively controlling the carrying of concealed weapons. Largely, this is because of the difficulties of search and prosecution, which have been set forth so clearly in your editorials dealing with this subject. Certainly there must be many violations of the law respecting carrying of pistols and revolvers because less than a half dozen licenses to carry concealed weapons are customarily issued annually by the Police Department.

A number of States now have reasonably effective legislation concerning the sale, possession and registration of the types of revolvers and pistols used to commit crime. A committee of the kind you suggest will be able to profit from a study of the better features of these acts and will also, of course, give thoughtful consideration to the proper as well as the improper use of firearms. It can then draft a law to which no honest man can object since he will surely believe in the need for reasonable control of firearms.

What is needed, in short, is a realistic approach to the whole problem by a committee truly representative of all the groups involved. Your commendable editorial pointing the way toward better protection of the lives and property of the people of the District of Columbia will, I hope, have prompt attention.

Negro Housing

My Negro maid has had her house sold over her head. There are no houses to rent in Washington, she says. What happens to them? She has about six or more people depending on her—an old mother, an old uncle, an adopted nephew, a sister and child whose husband is off in the Army, and a brother just out of the hospital (with a 3-year-old child) whose wife just died.

She is right when she says there are no houses to rent. There are houses aplenty for sale with a thousand dollars down, and they do not have more than a few hundred saved up.

The real estate people tell me that repairs are so high and the rent controls so hard, people do not want to rent any more. Cannot something be done to release a few more houses for rent? Is there any way to keep her from being turned out on the street with old people and children?

Food Prices

The "New York Housewife," has the right idea about food prices, in her letter of May 22. "To have food at high prices . . . is better than no food and low prices," especially to those of us who have the know-how to use lower-priced meat cuts which are always in the meat racks now.

Mass purchasing power, at all times, can be built up on the good judgment of buyers in any bracket better than it can be handled by the intricate and over-all planning of those who take the business of consumer-buying completely out of our hands. In the matter of tax cuts, Mr. Bowles' committee claims that the Knutson tax-cut program "fails to support purchasing power of the masses." I do not understand this statement, since conflicting statements show that "the taxes we all pay take about $1 out of every $4."

Famine Riddle

Perhaps you would be good enough to instruct me. I am quite confused and no doubt ignorant. You have told us for some time about the critical food shortages in Europe, the near-starvation nations, occasionally about food riots or threatened riots, and also about counterthreats of death penalties for the troublemakers. It all added up to a great big reason why we should understand and support the Government's program of foreign relief. If I needed any convincing, you convinced me.

But on May 18, 1947, the New York Times, which is reputed to be equally as reliable as my Washington Post, published a picture with a most disturbing legend: "A large order of potatoes goes to waste in Alabama," and below: "More than 50 tons of surplus vegetables grown in Baldwin County are dumped by Government near Foley because of glutted market. Kerosene was poured on them to make them unfit for consumption."

Explanations in terms of the economics of supply and demand are sickening when weighed against the cries of hungry children—or so it seems to me. Please tell me what is murder, anyway? things in terms of crime. Please tell me, what is murder, anyway? Please instruct me in the art of double talk.

Armed Forces Merger

There can be no effective armed forces merger from the top while the tentacles of each services are allowed to grow without plan at the bottom up through to a level just short of Cabinet rank. If the services are to be merged, why not start at the bottom and work up?

When an ordinary taxpayer looks at his pay check reduced by 20 per cent while riding past Bethesda and Walter Reed Hospitals, Bolling Field or Anacostia, he can only wonder why an Army doctor is unable to care for a naval patient.

He can only wonder why sailors must be assigned shore duty to buy towels, sheets, bolts, nuts and screws both for ships and vast shore establishments while the Army and Air Force also are engaged in this work, side by side; or why a civil engineer must wear a sailor's suit to build a dock, a storehouse or family house for a naval establishment while the Army engineers are doing identical work elsewhere. Then he begins to wonder why the Marine Corps has no doctors, civil engineers, dentists, nor hospitals but are content to borrow these billets and services from the Navy and he may then realize why the Marines are so efficient—having only their own job to do.

It is generally agreed that supply of material is the decisive factor in modern warfare and that total war is here to stay. Therefore not only for economy but for effective distribution, coordination in procurement is a vital necessity. None of the proposed merger bills offers much in the way of coordination of services, supply, medical, dental or otherwise; consequently the efforts of each are frittered away on essentials not directly concerned with its mission. Since each will not agree to a single standard, even to nomenclature or stock numbering of a bolt, nut, screw or necktie, it is obvious why it costs each service more than item is worth to purchase, inspect it and store it.

In general the Navy should man ships and with the Marine Corps maintain advance bases. The Air Force generally should have cognizance of air fields and installations and services not used by either the Army or Navy. The Army, being, essentially a land based activity, should act as the service force not only for itself but for the other two services, thereby freeing Navy aid Air Force personnel for duties in accordance with their respective missions.

Therefore Congress should immediately abolish the following Navy bureaus and activities integrating the personnel and facilities of each in its counterpart of the Army: (1) Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, (2) Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, (3) Bureau of Yards and Docks, (4) Office of Navy Chaplains, (5) Navy Radio Stations in continental United States, (6) Navy Material Inspection Service:

The above bureaus and agencies transfer would include all naval supply depots, hospitals and other naval shore establishments except shipyards, bases, experimental and administrative offices. The Navy and Air Forces then would call upon the Army to lend them such service personnel as were required for naval and Air Force establishments and would compensate on an actual cost basis from current appropriations. The same would be true for other material and services.

The Navy would transfer to the Air Force: (1) All air fields in continental United States and both East and West defense triangles, not solely used for training, (2) Naval Air Transport Service in continental United States, (3) all other purely air facilities where duplicate facilities are maintained by the Air Force.

The Army would transfer to the Navy: (1) Army Transportation Service (water), (2) all installations at advance bases outside of defense triangles including radio stations, dispensaries and other shore establishments.

The Air Force would transfer to the Navy all Air Transport Command facilities outside of defense triangles as well as all air fields at advance bases except those where the Joint Chiefs of Staff designated the Air Force as having paramount interest.

Such changes enumerated above would put national defense on a practical and paying basis and would probably increase the material value of our national insurance policy about 50 per cent. In addition the military efficiency would be augmented to a degree where a Pearl Harbor would be impossible even in the imagination. The Navy-Marine Corps relationship has set the pattern and it works. Why not follow it?

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

Unorthodox Stassen

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Running for President of the United States is a punishing assignment. Now and then former Gov. Harold Stassen touches home base here to rest and recuperate before he starts out on another political foray.

He is just now touring Texas as the beginning of an effort to line up Southern delegates behind his candidacy. Last week in Iowa and Wisconsin he talked with political leaders and made several speeches.

Under the rules he has laid down for himself in running for the Republican nomination, Stassen has a particularly tough assignment. He has no State employes on State payrolls who can give part of their time to organizing his campaign. Stassen is on his own.

In light of the fact, the miracle is that he has advanced as far as he has. When he returned two years ago from service with the Navy in the Pacific, he had to impress his personality on notoriously forgetful voters. Today the Gallup Poll shows that he stands second, thanks to two years of speech-making, broadcasting and almost incessant travel.

How much does second place in popularity signify one year in advance of the Republican convention in Philadelphia? This is a question which some of Stassen's admirers are beginning anxiously to ask themselves. They are disturbed by reports that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York is already so far out in front that he cannot be stopped.

Stassen seemed to further this talk in an interview he gave here some time ago. In that interview he said he would accept second place on the ticket if he approved of the platform and of the man who was nominated for first place on that platform. Veteran observers read into this an admission of failure.

It coincided with widely circulated reports that the Republican ticket in 1948 will be Dewey and Stassen. Certainly that would be a powerful ticket. It would have the appeal of youth and dynamic energy, and it would have geographical balance.

BUT THE husky Minnesotan gives no hint that he is ready to accept such a compromise. He says that the wrong emphasis has been put on his second-place remark. I merely signified that if another candidate were nominated for the Presidency, then he would consider the circumstances and decide whether he could accept the vice presidential nomination. It signified, too, that he does not believe in playing the game by the orthodox rules.

You get a somewhat different impression of Stassen, the man, here in his home territory. While his speeches often sound like those of Wendell Willkie, the resemblance ends there.

Willkie was impetuous, impulsive, often acting on the sudden spur of emotion. Stassen is deliberate, impassive—each move studied out in advance. In his severe, almost bare office in the Pioneer Building here, the impression is that of great drive under tight control—a terrific head of steam in a double-rivited boiler.

That is what those who have known him longest say about him. They tell anecdotes about his driving ambition. One of these, which may be merely part of the Stassen legend, concerns the days when he was a brilliant student at the University of Minnesota Law School.

In recognition of his outstanding ability, Stassen was one of the editors of the Law Review. But a sharp difference with the other editors grew up, arising partly from the fact that Stassen had so many irons in the fire and was accused of devoting too little attention to the Review. At the meeting at which they came to the parting of the ways, Stassen is reported to have faced the others and dramatically proclaimed:

"In 1948 I'll be in the Senate of the United States, and where will you be?"

IN 1928 when Stassen was 21 years old, that was a measure of his ambition. Whether his presidential candidacy would be further advanced if he were in the Senate today is another vexing question. Certainly if he had decided to run last fall, he would now be in Washington. But that is the kind of orthodoxy Stassen rejects.

He has here at home an informal organization working hard to put him over. Prominent businessmen and politicians in the Twin Cities are giving generously in time and money. So are such Stassen adherents as Senator Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin, who came out for the political get-together with Stassen in Milwaukee.

In Minneapolis, the Republican organization behind Stassen seems to have blundered in going all out in a campaign to defeat for reelection the city's popular Mayor Hubert H. Humphrey. Stassen says he is not interested in this campaign. But the certain defeat of the Republican machine candidate, Frank Collins, will be interpreted by Stassen's enemies as evidence of weakness at home.

You wonder sometimes what the drive is that makes anyone want to take the punishment of running for President. You must be all things to all men. Complaining about Stassen's failure to track down delegates, a local politician said, "Why, he's trying to be a statesman before he's nominated."

That is apparently against the old rules, and Stassen always plays by his own rules.

Tax Alternative

By Ernest Lindley

Changes Needed To Avoid Veto

IT NOW SEEMS highly improbable that the Republican tax reduction bill will become law. The bill did not obtain a two-thirds majority in either house. It almost certainly faces a veto. There will be another opportunity to vote when the conference report is presented. Some who opposed the original House bill because it was retroactive to January 1, 1947, might switch to approval of the conference report, which will follow the Senate in making the cut effective July 1, 1947. Some Senators who voted in the negative on the ground that the proposed reductions were too deep might balance off their record by agreeing to the conference report as the only alternative to no reduction at all during 1947. Switching of that sort has been done before. But the two thirds vote in each house necessary to override a veto is not in hand at this time.

Lindley

Political expediency probably would call for White House approval. But the Administration has taken a firm stand in opposition up to now. Moreover, it has succeeded in holding most of the Democrats in line on this question. Presidential approval of the Republican tax bill would pull the rug from under his party in Congress.

THE PRACTICAL alternatives to the Republican tax bill appear to be a postponement of all tax reduction until 1948 or a new bill calling for smaller cuts. If Republican plans were made effective January 1, 1948, instead of July 1, 1947, it would be less objectionable to the White House. This would cut by half the revenue loss which the bill would cause during the fiscal year.

Two other serious objections would remain, however. The first is that cuts are not scaled as to give smaller taxpayers enough benefit relative to larger taxpayers. The second is that the total reduction proposed is so large that it may interfere with the careful overhauling of the tax structure during the 1948 session. That is, the margin for further tax reduction left during the next year or two may be too small to accommodate revisions of the sort which Secretary of the Treasury Snyder proposed for study by the House Ways and Means Committee.

An alternative to the Republican tax bill could be put together and acted upon in a very few days. It might call, for example, for cuts only half as deep as those contained in the Senate bill. This would allay or eliminate two of the chief arguments against the present bill. Yet it would provide taxpayers with some relief beginning July 1.

ANOTHER ALTERNATIVE would be to make a small cut by points, instead of by percentages. This would be more acceptable to the Democrats because it would give the small taxpayers a relatively better "break," although it would give some relief to all. With this might be combined an amendment giving all taxpayers the benefit of the community property principle—of dividing income between husband and wife in computing the personal income tax.

Taxpayers in 10 States which have community property laws already enjoy this advantage. Of all the inequities in the tax law, this is the most glaring. That it is inexcusable, is commonly conceded. It will be corrected next year, almost certainly. But if any tax reduction is justified this year, part of it could easily be made in this way.

The Republicans believe that they will make political capital out of their tax bill, whether or not it becomes law. Their net gain will be smaller than they now expect, however, if tax reductions are made next year and if the Democrats can convince the country that the Republican plan this year (1) cut too deep for the safety of the Federal finances and (2) unduly favored the rich and well-to-do over the millions of smaller taxpayers.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The Two-Headed Calf

THE FORMATION of a third political party in the next 18 months is now a positive probability. That is the chief result of Henry Agard Wallace's apocalyptic barnstorming tour across the United States. The Wallace trip has added the final necessary ingredient—acute inflammation of the Wallace ego—which is necessary to a third party venture headed by Wallace.

The skimpy reports in most newspapers have not sufficiently emphasized the great crowds that have turned out to see and hear Wallace all along his route. The crowds have everywhere been organized, of course, by the Communist Party and the extreme left labor groups. Equally obviously, besides a large element of sincerely troubled, woolly-minded people, the crowds have included many who went along in the spirit of yokels gaping at a two-headed calf at a county fair. But to Wallace and his entourage, crowds are crowds. Their applause has indubitably sapped Wallace's remaining will to resist, whatever he may say about it.

Therefore Wallace can be counted upon to yield to the intoxicating temptation, if the Communists, fellow travelers and fellow wanderers who now surround him really press him to raise the third party standard. The formation of a third party, as soon as circumstances should be favorable, has been a conspicuous feature of the American Communist line since the war. Working out this equation, the only uncertain factor is seen to be whether the Communist high command considers that the time has come to put its plan into effect.

PRECISELY in this connection, the Wallace barnstorming tour has produced another important result. Both the White House and the Republicans have had observers posted on the Wallace trail. And they have been sending back to Washington bug-eyed estimates of the cash Wallace has raised. In Chicago, for example, 28,000 people came to his meeting, and what is more laid money on the line for this dubious privilege. An Ed Kelly expert who was present made the significant comment: "There wasn't a square in the house"—by which he meant that there were none of those well-drilled, hard-faced men in grey fedoras with whom the Chicago Democratic machine is accustomed to fill empty stands at big political rallies.

Wallace's Chicago take alone is estimated at $100,000. In Los Angeles, $40,000 is understood to have been collected in contributions in addition to the ticket sale. Altogether, the practical politicians rather ruefully estimate the total return from the trip at around one million dollars. This puts Wallace in the Jenny Lind, Gen. Tom Thumb class. It also provides a handsome kitty to be used in the organizing work of the Progressive Citizens of America, which is the embryo of the third party of the future.

At the same time, the Wallace barnstorming has given a powerful impetus to PCA recruiting. For months, the Communist Party directive, has made the PCA the chief front group. The major energy of the Communist leadership and rank and file has gone into building a skeleton PCA right across the country. The puzzled, the confused, the seekers after Utopia who have cheered Wallace, are now everywhere being transformed into the flesh on these PCA party-line bones. In short, the leader, the financing, and much of the local machinery of a third party are already in existence. It only remains to give the signal, and a third party will come into full-fledged being.

ALL OF THIS is supremely troubling to the White House and the Democratic high command, as well it may be. Just to make matters worse, Wallace's efforts have been chiefly concentrated in States whence came Wallace delegations in 1944. And there is more than one of these which may well send a Wallace delegation to the convention in 1948. Minnesota, Wisconsin, California with its strange primaries, and Washington are all regarded as danger points. If Wallace can get even one delegation—and the possibility is admitted by Democratic chieftains on a very high level—the third party movement will probably start only after the Democratic convention. The forecast is that the convention will be used as the setting for a tremendous row about the platform and a vitriolic attack on President Truman, followed by a dramatic walkout by Wallace in all his misty glory.

A third party will not poll a large vote, and will elect no one. Its effect will be, very simply, to encourage the Republicans to nominate a highly conservative, even isolationist candidate, and to elect any candidate the Republicans nominate by cutting Democratic strength in key States. But that will offend neither the Communists nor Wallace. The Communists want the next President to be, if possible, a Republican isolationist of the Robert R. McCormick stripe, in order to neutralize this country in world affairs. As for Wallace, he is sure that any Republican administration will usher in a great depression, and that a great depression will be his great opportunity. "My time," he has said more than once, "is 1952."

Lest this forecast seem too positive, it must be repeated that the Communist high command has the final decision as to whether the third party will be launched—and as far as is known, the decision is not made yet. One more point only needs to be added. After making all due discounts, Wallace's response from the country has been impressive. It does not, however, betoken anything but confusion—confusion as to the facts of the world situation, and confusion as to what to do about it. The real lesson of the Wallace tour, in short, is that President Truman and the other national leaders still have an immense job ahead, both in explaining to the country how matters stand, and in putting forward a positive, constructive program to bring prosperity and peace to a troubled world.

The Gallup Poll

Majority Favor Debt Slice Rather Than Cut in Taxes

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 29.—The underlying issue throughout all the Senate debate on tax reduction has been the question: Which is more important, to reduce the heavy tax burden or to cut down some of our colossal national debt?

Many have felt that we should do a little of both. But if the question reduces itself to a choice between the two, the majority of Americans would rather see debt reduction take precedence over tax cutting.

Of course no American family enjoys paying taxes; the ideal life would be one in which taxing was held to a minimum. But a nation-wide survey by the Institute finds that fear of the consequences of a huge debt hanging over the Nation's economic system ranks somewhat more important in the public's mind than does the need for getting income taxes back to more normal proportions.

Perennial Issue

The issue is of more than temporary interest, for it will recur every year when Congress takes up a new tax bill. The issue was presented to the voters this year in an Institute survey, coast-to-coast, on the following:

"The United States today has a billion dollars surplus in its running expenses. Should this money be used to reduce income taxes or should it be used to reduce the national debt?

The vote:

Cut taxes	38%
Reduce debt	53
No opinion	9

From the point of view of politics alone, the stategy of making some reduction in both the tax rates and the national debt at the same time would serve to please both factions in the population. Yet the fact that a substantial number of people place debt cutting ahead of tax reduction is significant. It tends to support the conclusion that American voters are not as ready as many critics of democracy have supposed to take all they can from the Government and give as little in return as possible.

Of course the group willing to see the present income tax rates remain unchanged includes some citizens who are not income tax payers.

But also included are many who do have to pay substantial taxes. Statistics show that something like three fourths of all employed persons are income taxpayers. Among business and professional people polled—a high tax paying group—three fifths favored debt reduction rather than tax reduction.

The problem of taxation, as observers have pointed out, is how to raise enough money from the people for governmental operation without dampening the incentive to work.

In England there are many cases where workers refuse to work more than a few days a week because the money they would earn is taken away in taxation.

One classic case cited is that of a highly skilled English engraver who hired out two days a week as gardener, and worked the other four days at his regular trade. The demand for engravers is tremendous at the moment and this man could have earned large additional sums by devoting six days to his trade instead of only four. But by collecting his gardener's wage in cash and not reporting the income, he was was better off than by working a full week as an engraver at handsome pay—subject to British tax rates.

'Farmer's Daughter' Won't Goad Voters, But It Should Amuse Them

By Richard L. Coe

POLITICS AND LOVE are skillfully mixed in a pleasant little comedy at the Metropolitan, "The Farmer's Daughter."

Loretta Young, Joseph Cotten and Ethel Barrymore give it make-believe elegance and the story of how a Swedish housemaid runs for Congress is refreshingly novel. All in all, it's slick and entertaining.

Ethel Barrymore

Yesterday's news stories about "alleged Missouri election frauds" destroy some comment one might make about the picture's political approach being naive. If ballot boxes can be stolen from a Kansas City vault, Katie's adventures in political wonderland probably are as true to life. Certainly, however, Capitol Hill's inhabitants will prefer this treatment of their careers to Frank Capra's wild, woolly "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

The mixture of comedy, romance and down-to-earth political machinery is so slickly put together, however, that its very slickness is too pat to make its frankly serious points convincing. "State of the Union," using the same pattern, made its plea for a watchful electorate more effectively.

But for all its laudable aims to elect an honorable Congress, "The Farmer's Daughter" is essentially a comedy-romance and in that department does nicely.

Miss Young plays a farm girl on her way to the State capital to take a nursing course. When she accepts a lift from a lazy house painter (have you noticed that since the time of A. Hitler all house painters on the screen are viewed with a fishy eye?), Loretta runs into trouble. He busts up his truck, borrows her money and, horrors of horrors, puts an innocent girl in a compromising position.

All the Political Answers

So the lass with the Swedish background winds up broke in the big town. She takes a job as housemaid in the home of a young Representative and his politically wise mother. With Joseph Cotten to play a most eligible bachelor who surely would be an ideal extra man for Washington hostesses, and Miss Barrymore to act his worldly wise mother, Loretta is in fancy company indeed.

Love? Natch. With the help of the family butler — amusingly played by Charles Bickford—Loretta mothers the Congressman. She brings him his breakfast, laughs when he breaks the ice on the family skating pond, gives him a massage and feeds him Swedish punch.

Being a smart country girl, she also has all the answers on all political questions. You know—who voted for what when and who's got which members of his family on the Government payroll. The girl unquestionably is a deep student of Drew Pearson's column.

Since she knows all these things and the machine doesn't, you can imagine what happens when she opens her mouth in public. The other side insists that she run, her brothers come down from the farm to help with the campaign, she gets a stupid voice instructor and—well you know.

So you see why we call the yarn naive.

Drop That Cane, Ethel!

Bickford is pleasantly offhand as the family butler who calls his mistress by her first name, and Cotten is extremely facile about the little pieces of business he inserts to suggest that Congressmen, too, are human. Miss Barrymore has a penchant for a cane in the early reels, but she wisely discards the thing halfway through. Let's have no more of this decrepit delicacy, Miss Ethel. You're hale and hearty and Lionel's wheelchair is enough disability for the Barrymores!

Miss Young has a better part than she has enjoyed in years though her accent is often too quaint even for Minnesota.

No, there's nothing even mildly colossal about "The Farmer's Daughter," but it is a pleasant little comedy.

Ingrid May Be Roundest Joan

By Leonard Lyons

New York.—The film adaptation of "Joan of Lorraine" may be postponed until next winter, because of Ingrid Bergman. For unless the movie is made in a hurry, Miss Bergman would emerge not only as the greatest Joan of them all, but also the roundest . . . Ethel Merman is being signed for an ABC radio series, a program in which she will do no singing.

Ingrid Bergman

Dixie Davis, the former lawyer for the late Dutch Schultz whose testimony convicted Jimmy Hines, now is a prosperous manufacturer of ice cream in California . . . The PEN Convention, which is being held this year in Zurich, will be held in New York next year, from May 30 to June 6 . . . The record Bob Hope made last week with Bing Crosby's program runs 50 minutes, and half of it will have to be cut. It ran overtime because of the ad libbing—such as Hope's leaving the stage to show his script to people in the audience . . . Crosby, incidentally, was signed for another year by his sponsor, Philco, and the American Broadcasting Co.

Jack Benny wants to spend his vacation in summer stock at the Cape. . . . Jim Farley, in the Stork Club last night, denied that his visit to the Elks Convention in Portland, Oreg., this summer would have any political significance. "I always go to Elks conventions," said Farley. He pointed to another man in the room and said: "In fact, I first met him on a train to the Elks Convention 25 years ago—and we've been close friends ever since. I go to Elks conventions because I enjoy them." . . . Axel Wenner-Gren is telling his friends that he's conferring with the United States Government about his interests in a project involving atom-propelled submarines capable of crossing the Atlantic without surfacing.

Sabu drove to California from New York last week. In a restaurant outside Tulsa, Okla., where he stopped for lunch, the waitress rushed to his table and gushed: "What a thrill this is, Sabu. You are the second celebrity to stop here. The first was a man who lives next door to Will Rogers' son" . . . Edward Arnold, who once portrayed the President in a movie, will star in a radio series to be called "Mr. President." Phil Silvers, the comic, will support him.

One of the graduates who will receive a B.A. degree from N. Y. U. next month is Jean R. Kintner, who was Broadway's youngest and prettiest producer, before she retired to marry Robert E. Kintner, the radio executive. As Jean Rodney she produced "Swingin' the Dream" at the Center Theater, and her revival of "Outward Bound" played the command performance in Washington . . . The Duke of Windsor has thrown away his typewriter and vows that he will not write his memoirs—not even those covering his boyhood and schooling . . . John Steinbeck, whose kneecap was fractured last week, will be permitted to leave his bed and use a wheelchair at Lenox Hill Hospital this week.

Without Painful Backache

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

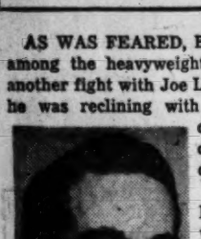
Yankee Homers Down Nats Again, 5 to 2; Barney Poole Flunks Out of West Point

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

AS WAS FEARED, Billy Conn is attempting a fistic comeback among the heavyweights but is discreetly saying nothing about another fight with Joe Louis. The last seen of Conn in a prize ring he was reclining with slanted jaw on the canvas with Louis calmly waiting out the 10-count in a neutral corner, and 50,000 fans registering a high degree of disgust.



POVICH

Conn's comeback will certainly never lead to another Louis fight. At best he will slide into the role of trial horse for the upcoming lads who may be clamoring for a shot at the champion. The yelping of the ringsiders who paid $100 to watch Conn waltz around Louis in panic for seven rounds before getting knocked out, can still be heard and any attempt to rematch 'em would foment a buyer's strike.

The paradox is that Conn could lick most of the guys who are still around wanting a Louis match. As a lightheavyweight he beat Melio Bettina and Gus Lesnevich twice, and he could probably lick Joe Baksi, who is next in line for a Louis match. But nevertheless he is the easiest man to dismiss in any discussion of the heavyweight title. He had two shots at it, blew one of them stupidly, and in his second chance was a panic-stricken 184-pounder in there with a fellow he knew could knock his head off.

CONN'S DECISION to return to the ring doubtless means that the horses haven't been running well for him. He acquired a small stable with his purse from the last Louis fight, and embarked on a turf career, but his thoughts now are lightly turning to fighting again, and apparently it isn't spring fever. Too many also-rans in the Billy Conn stable; at least he never finished worse than second.

Six years ago, on the night of June 18, Conn's fistic future seemed boundless. He was in the Yankee Stadium ring beating the ears off Joe Louis and only nine minutes away from winning the world heavyweight title in the biggest fistic upset in years. Going into the thirteenth round he was a confident, dancing, jabbing winner, taunting Louis with left hands, skipping out of range when the champion fought back, and on his way to carving out an artistic decision that contained a boxing lesson for the slipping champ.

And then in the thirteenth, he blew it. Not content with winning the title on points as Tunney did twice, he invited Louis to mix it with him, and attempted to turn puncher. A half-minute later, Conn was on the floor, knocked out, and Louis had his title back.

IN THE INTERVENING five years, most of which the two fighters spent in the Army, the Conn-Lewis rematch was a building, and Promoter Mike Jacobs could brazenly post his ringside seats at $100, so hungry were the customers for a renewal of the sensational 1941 battle. Cheerfully the fans dumped almost two million dollars into the till by fight night on June 19, five years and a day after they last met.

But the Conn who came out of his corner that night last summer was not even a reasonable facsimile of the cocky youngster who had outboxed Louis for 12 rounds five years before. On his face was written misgivings, while the always inscrutable Louis calmly pawed with a left hand for the opening that would fetch his knockout punch again. Conn was in retreat from the opening bell, and it was a strange beginning.

The night before the fight, Art Rooney, Conn's chief backer, quickly hedged all his bets on his fellow townsman. "I've still got a little bundle riding on him, but it's sentimental," Rooney told me. "Billy can't win. He knows he's over-matched and he doesn't have much enthusiasm for this one. You could see it all during his training."

ROONEY HAD HIS own explanation for Conn's transformation. "He's like every guy who has been knocked out by Joe Louis," he said before the fight. "Sure, Billy was great the first time he fought Louis. He'd never been tagged by Joe before and he never knew how hard Joe could hit. He knows now, and it's not good. No guy going in there against Louis the second time has the same confidence. I don't like Billy's chances."

Only once during the eight rounds did Conn muster the courage to let go at Louis with a right hand. That was in the fourth when he hit the champion with his best shot to the chin. When the champion brushed it off with no more concern than he'd have for a mosquito bite, Conn went back into his shell, a beaten cookie and knowing it. In the eighth, Louis knocked him out with the air of a man tired of fooling around.

At 30, Conn is three years younger than Louis, and certainly entitled to a comeback if he likes. He can lick a lot of guys, no doubt, but his best friends ought to tell him to stay out of the Louis league.

Embree Tops Tigers; Tribe Wins, 4-1

Detroit, May 29 (AP).—Charles (Red) Embree, determined little Cleveland righthander, turned the tables on the Detroit Tigers today with a four-hit pitching performance that was worth a 4 to 1 triumph over the same Detroit club that twice this season had beaten him by shutout scores.

Rattling 10 hits off Paul (Dizzy) Trout to score twice in the second inning and twice more in the ninth, the Indians knocked a full game off Detroit's league lead, which now stands at 2½ games over the second place New York Yankees.

Embree, pitching in 50-degree temperature, walked only two men, struck out four—all in succession—and didn't let the Tigers get but one man as far as second base until Dick Wakefield's homer ruined his shutout after two men were out in the ninth.

The Tribe bunched four straight hits, singles by Eddie Robinson, Joe Gordon and Pat Seerey and a double by Catcher Jim Hegan, for two runs in the second inning, and that was all the batting help Embree needed to mark up his fourth win against three defeats.

Hoot Evers' two-base muff of Hegan's fly helped the Indians to their two unearned runs that put the game on ice in the ninth.

Christopher's Single Beats Red Sox, 3-2

Philadelphia, May 29 (AP).—Relief Pitcher Russ Christopher smacked a single to left that scored the deciding run in the ninth today as the Philadelphia Athletics snapped a four-game losing streak by nosing out the Boston Red Sox, 3-2.

The hit culminated a two-run uprising that enabled the Macks overcome a 2-1 deficit. A single by Buddy Roasr and a triple by Hank Majeski produced the first run. A walk and a double by Eddie Joost in the fifth accounted for the only other run.

Starting Pitcher Bob Savage yielded only five safeties, but two of these were sufficient for the Red Sox to notch two runs. One was a fifth-inning homer by Don Gutteridge.

Ted Williams, resting a sore leg, and Bobby Doerr, out with a wrenched back, were missing from the Red Sox line-up.

Williams was struck on the leg by his own ball in batting practice both yesterday and Tuesday. He limped into the dressing room hoping to play but Trainer Win Green said "definitely not."

Stymie and Assault In Suburban 'Cap

New York, May 29 (AP).—Eight thoroughbreds, headed by Stymie and Assault, were entered today for the sixty-first running tomorrow of the Suburban Handicap at Bedmont Park. The two presently are second and third on the turf's list of money winners.

If all eight go to the post the miles and a quarter race will be worth $40,600 to the winner. Should Stymie win this would put him well over Whirlaway's mark of $561,161 as racing's greatest money winner. Stymie needs only $21,126 to equal Whirlaway's mark.

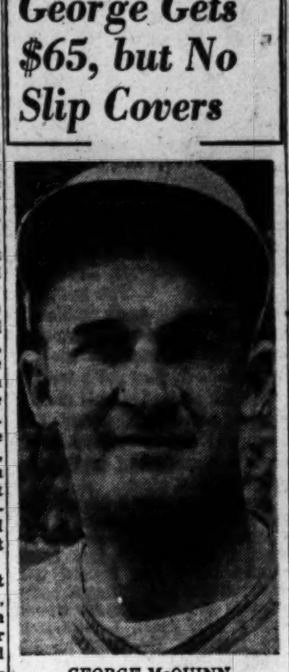
George Gets $65, but No Slip Covers



GEORGE McQUINN
... Wash Day Blues?

GEORGE McQUINN was still the man without a slip cover when he showed up for the Nats-Yankee game yesterday at Griffith Stadium.

But George, as they say in dueling circles, had got satisfaction.

Satisfaction for the Yankee first-sacker, former Washington-Lee High star now leading the American League in hitting, came in Arlington County Court earlier in the day. Judge Reid awarded George $65 in his suit against Gene's Launders & Cleaners, of 5th rd and N. Randolph st., Arlington.

McQuinn's story to the judge was simple:

He sent his soiled slip covers to the laundry.

The laundry sent them back, spots intact.

He again sent his soiled slip covers to the laundry.

The laundry sent back neither slip covers nor spots.

McQuinn, whose home is now Alexandria, got his $65 satisfaction without an argument. The laundry had no lawyer in court.

Navy Athletes Get Awards

Annapolis, Md., May 29 (AP).—Winners of the Naval Academy's prized athletic awards were announced today by Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr.

James H. H. Carrington, three-sport second class man from Riverside, Conn., won the Navy Athletic Association award for all-around excellence.

Kenneth L. Shugart, jr., basketball captain of Cheyenne, Wyo., was named for the Thompson Trophy Cup as having done the most "for the promotion of athletics."

Arthur L. Bigley, sprinter and track captain of Butte, Mont., special award for excellent in individual competition.

The NNA prize, a pair of marine binoculars, ordinarily goes to a first classman, but Carrington's stellar performances as a guard on the Middie Football Eleven, free-style sprinter on the swimming team and midfielder on the lacrosse outfit put him ahead of other Navy athletes for general excellence.

Baronette Softballers Rout Falls Church, 24-6

With a 24-6 rout of Falls Church the Bethesda-Chavy Chase High girls closed out their sofeball season yesterday on the home diamond. It was their 11th victory in 12 games. Featured were the home runs of Betty Dellett, Mary Louise Hook and Ann Fentone.

Grid Star Fails to Pass Two Subjects

Cadet George B. (Barney) Poole, All-America end on West Point's three-year undefeated football team, yesterday was dismissed from the Academy.

Acting on a recommendation received from West Point, the War Department yesterday announced the grid star's dismissal for failure to make a passing grade in two subjects.

The recommendation from West Point said that Poole, a senior, had managed to show only a small margin of proficiency in studies throughout the year but had failed in general reviews this year with the result that he was forced to take final examinations in military history, ordnance and mechanics.

He failed in all three tests.

The War Department here issued the following statement:

"Cadet Poole failed to meet the minimum academic requirements at West Point. This failure involved TWO subjects in which he did not make a passing grade. As a result of this academic failure, Cadet Poole is being discharged from the Military Academy without a diploma and also without a commission. The academic board of the Military Academy examines each case of failure to meet academic requirements and in the case of a first classman makes recommendations to the superintendent of the academy as to whether or not he should be graduated. In Mr. Poole's case the recommendation has been received that he not be permitted to graduate and insofar as the War Department is concerned, the matter is ended . . ."

Poole, 22 years old and 6 feet 3 inches tall, played one season for the Uni[illegible]y of Mississippi before he ente[illegible]e Marine Corps.

He [illegible] appointed to the academy from that corps and played on the cadet eleven for three years.

He also is a better than average baseball and basketball player.

One of Poole's brothers is Jim Poole, end for the New York pro Giants who recently quit the team to become a coach. A third brother was a regular on the Mississippi team last fall.

Request Granted for Further Qualifying for 500-Mile Race

Indianapolis, May 29 (AP).—The field for the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway tomorrow was thrown wide open on the eve of the classic when the American Automobile Association contest board late today granted a request of drivers and car owners to permit further qualifications.

The late reopening of qualifications was made conditional on the granting of waivers by the owners of the 28 cars which already had qualified when the regular deadline was passed last night.

There was an immediate scurrying about to obtain waivers from the qualified car owners.

The speedway announced that if assent of all was obtained the track would be opened at 6 p. m. (Central Daylight Time) for another hour of qualifying runs.

Seven Cars Ready

About seven cars were ready to to take the time tests.

The belated appeal for reopening the qualifications was made as the qualified drivers met to receive their final instructions.

Leaders in the movement for another qualification session were Joe Lencki and Ralph Hepburn of Chicago, and Joe Thorne, Hollywood sportsman.

Thorne is the owner of that car which the late George Robson drove to victory in last year's race. Tony Bettenhausen made an unsuccessful attempt to qualify the car late yesterday, then qualified in another car.

Lencki also is a car owner and Hepburn is president of the American society of professional automobile racers, the group that held out for more prize money but finally reached an agreement under which A. S. P. A. R. members were allowed to make late entries.

The drivers got their final instructions today in an outdoor session under overcast skies and with a cold wind whistling through the infield.

But, the speedway's fabulous luck is expected to continue tomorrow. The Weather Bureau predicted sunshine, but continued cool weather, which will favor high speed. The race has been postponed only once—in 1915—although the 1926 event was stopped at 400 miles by rain.

Business Booms

Streets and roads into the 433-acre racing plant were lined with stands selling miniature racers, drivers' photographs and food—and business was good.

The cars waifing to grab choice parking space were late in forming this year, but the lines were lengthening rapidly today. The Speedway said 65,000 reserved seats had been sold and it was prepared to handle a crowd of more than 100,000. It never discloses the paid attendance.

Traffic officials will use an airplane to direct traffic in an effort to avoid last year's traffic jam—the worst in the race's hisory.

A late settlement of a prize money dispute with the American Society of Professional Automobile Racers brought most of the "name" drivers to the track and only a half-dozen ambitious small-track drivers will vie with them over the brick and asphalt oval.

In the pole position will be methodical Ted Horn of Paterson, N. J., no worse than fourth in the last seven races. Beside him will be Cliff Bergere of Toledo, Ohio, who has driven nearly 6000 miles in Speedway competition, but has yet to win, and Mauri Rose of Chicago, cowinner in 1941.

Yogi Berra, Johnson Hit Big Blows

By Al Costello
Post Reporter

For one brief inning the Yankees of yesterday resembled the Bronx Bombers of yesteryear as they packed two homers and a triple into a rollicking sixth frame that set up a 5-2 victory over the Nats before 4955 fans—smallest home crowd of the season.

Once again the pestiferous Bill Johnson, Yank third baseman, over whom Griff frequently talked trade with the Yankee front office, was cast in the villian's role that found Early Wynn an unwilling victim and loser of his fourth decision.

Johnson crashed a three-run homer into the left center field bleachers in that tumultous sixth that saw the Yanks score all their runs on three hits—the aforementioned two homers and a triple—wrapped around two of the three walks that Wynn dished up.

Berra Gets Homer

Yogi Berra followed Johnson with an inside the park round tripper for the final Yank run.

Only Wednesday night Johnson's sizzling bat sent five Yanks vaulting over the plate in the Bombers' 9-5 triumph, giving him a neat record of 13 runs batted in in the last four games.

It was a 0-0 ball game for five innings with Wynn hurling easily and permitting only three hits.

The Nats blew two scoring chances off Frank Shea, Yank twirler, during these five innings but came up with two in the same sixth when Shea developed a lame shoulder, but not before he was credited with his fifth victory in six starts.

Joe Page, an erratic southpaw, came in for the final three innings and he was pretty good. The only liberty he permitted was Wynn's double that greeted him. He got the last nine Nats in order.

That sixth inning started ominously when Wynn issued his first walk, passing Snuffy Stirnweiss. Tommy Henrich shot a triple to left center that tscored Stirnweiss with the games first run.

Wynn seemingly had dug himself out of the hole when he made King Kong Keller line to Vernon and broke a sharp curve over Joe DiMaggio's knuckles for a third strike.

McQuinn Up

That brought up George McQuinn and the Nat board of strategy deemed it smart to walk him intentionally.

It wasn't. Johnson picked out a 2 and 1 pitch and when he got through, the ball was nestled in the fifth or sixth row of the left center bleachers, sending Henrich and McQuinn dancing across the platter ahead of him.

The Yogi followed with a sharp liner to left center that escaped Joe Grace's glove on an attempted running pick-up and rolled to the base of the wall. Grace had trouble picking it up and when he did the speeding Berra was rounding third and beat the relay with a head-first slide.

More Than Enough

It all amounted to those five big runs and, as it turned out, more than enough. The Nats, though, for solace scored twice off Shea before he retired in favor of Page with their two in the sixth. Spence singled and Priddy coaxed a walk with two out and both completed the trip around when Mark Christman slammed a double to left center.

Spence's double opening the second was wasted after Priddy popped and Evans hit into a double play after Christman was walked.

Hartung Puts Giants on Top

New York, May 29 (AP).—Clint Hartung, highly publicized New York Giant rookie who failed as an outfielder, hurled his mates back to the top of the National League standings today by stopping Brooklyn, 5 to 4, although he couldn't last the full nine innings.

Hartung, who didn't walk a batter, pulled out of his most serious jam in the eighth by grabbing Dixie Walker's smash and starting a double play after two men already had scored. When Gene Hermanski greeted him with a homer toopen the ninth he was replaced by Ken Trinkle.

It was the fourth straight pitching triumph for the Hondo, Texas, hurricane, who added a single and a triple to the Giant attack.

The defeat dropped the Dodgers, who took over the lead only yesterday into a tie for second with the Chicago Cubs, who were idle today because of rain.

Annie's Dream Coasts Home In Charles Town Feature

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., May 29. Thheere's an old popular song, "Did You Ever See a Dream Walking?" Today we say a dream running. She was Annie's Dream, a 6-year-old mare owned by H. N. Warren of Alexandria, Va.

The daughter of Gino, a champion in these parts last year, showed she has lost none of her skill by coasting into the wire 10 lengths in front of her closest opposition in the Foster Purse.

Making her first start of the year, Annie's Dream ignored a track that became sloppy when a storm hit thestorm hit the oval just before the fifth race. She ankled to the front and simply stayed there with Apprentice Jim Baird guiding.

William H. Bottluff's Sunday Knight was second and 2½ lengths in advance of H. M. Simpson's Time to Run. A field of eight competed in the test over the Charles Town Course of 120 feet more than 6 furlongs.

Annie's Dream, who developed a bad leg after winning 13 of 21 starts last year, returned a $4.20 mutuel to her legion of backers and was clocked in 1:19 2-5.

The game was called "Try to catch Annie" but despite a lot of hustling, russling and splashing, her rivals couldn't get close. Royal Step, Time to Run, Tintrel and Sunday Knight all tried hard but were beaten off horses.

Skee Riegel Upset After Beating Ouimet

Only Three U. S. Golfers Keep Pace

Carnoustie, May 28 (AP).—Three former American champions, Marvin (Bud) Ward, Willie Turnesa and Dick Chapman, slashed through today to the quarter-finals of the British Amateur Golf Championship, but a fourth Yankee aspirant, Skee Riegel, fell victim of the tournament's biggest upset when he was dumped out by a 45-year-old Scot.

Robert (Robin) Rutherford, a tall, spare mechanical engineer with a bushy mustache, held a peeve against the British Walker Cup selectors for not even inviting him to their trials earlier in the month, and he took it out on Riegel by beating the Glendale, Calif., star by 1 up in an afternoon match.

Not alone did the indignant Scotman crack down on the innocent Riegel. Earlier in the day he had served the British selectors crow on a silver platter by ousting Leonard Crewvey, leading singles player on their cup team, on the nineteenth hole.

Rutherford, who strained a ligame as he confided somberly:

"I just wanted to prove to the selectors of our Walker Cup team worthy of getting invited to their that I should at least have been trials."

Scots Cockier

Rutherford's triumph over Riegel, who had been picked by many to win the big cup, brought a muchneeded boost to scottish morale after Chapman had trampled down two highlanders like so much heather in the path of a tank.

In the morning the Pinehurst, N. C., ace shunted aside Vic Finlayson of Carnoustie, 6 and 5, and on his afternoon round he virtually ripped the long, rugged course apart as he trounced Alan Stevenson of Prestwick, 8 and 6. Chapman shot 11 fours and 1 three on the 12 holes necessary to stifle Stevenson.

He and the belligerent Rutherford will clash in one of the four 18-hole quarter-final matches tomorrow morning. Ward and Turnesa will tie into each other in a second, and the remaining two will be contested between various and assorted Britons. The semifinals are scheduled tomorrow afternoon, with the 36-hole final on Saturday. Not a former champion was left among the eight survivors tonight.

Beats Bishop

Ward, hope of Spokane, Wash., scored a morning victory over Maj. Anthony Duncan of Wales, 5 and 4, and then fought to the 20th hole in the afternoon before he eliminated tall Ted Bishop, the American amateur champion, 1 up. A topped spoon shot cost Bishop his chance of winning on the 18th hole.

Turnesa, pride of the many White Plains, N. Y., Turnesas defeated Hamilton McInally, a Scottish favorite, 2 and 1, in the morning and put on a blazing finish on his afternoon round to subdue Frank Stranahan of Toledo, 3 and 1.

Bill Bennings:

DEAR FOLKS:
6 at Charles Town

Within a week, the West Virginia Racing Commission will come out with a rule that will provide a consolidation payoff on the daily double when a horse is scratched in the second race after a bettor holds a ticket starting with a winner. Several States already have that rule. Maryland has promised to do something, but so far hasn't come across. The situation came up here the opening day when Ecobout won the first race at $22 and Town Camp was scratched in the second. Those with the "6 and 8" tickets received only their $2 back. Under the new provisions, they would get a sum calculated on the ratio of tickets sold on other horses to Ecobout. This method would have brought a payoff of about 9-1 to holders of the "6-8" tickets and the winning double which paid $185.20 would have been reduced accordingly. Racing Commission Chairman Beverley Broun got to work at once on the change. There's a veteran jockey here who deserves a break. Bill Nertney, with a lot of war service behind him, is seeking mounts. He's down to weight and needs only a chance. He could ride for me if I had horses. Sorry I didn't see the National Press Club's mule race here last Saturday. It's still the talk of the town. See you on the rail . . . BILL.

We rhapsodize and sing;
Yes, suddenly it's Spring.
But suddenly it ain't.

THIS MODERN WORLD

Local Rotarians are planning a new service for members who are forced to miss meetings because of illness.

The group has obtained a wire recorder from Sears Roebuck, and will make a record of the proceedings of each meeting.

The record will then be taken out to the ailing member and played for him, so that he can keep abreast of the club's activities. Pretty slick, eh?

FEMALE PHILOSOPHY

Greta Kirstein, of 3909 Georgia ave. nw., tells this one about her 12-year-old sister:

"Sally has been selling tickets for a ham dinner that her school (Petworth) is giving to raise funds for furniture for the kindergarten room.

"She approached a man on the street and gave him the usual sales talk about the tickets costing only $1, and he asked, 'When is the dinner?'

"'It's on June 5,' she replied. The man snapped, 'Why should I buy a ticket for a dinner that's to be given on June 5? I might be dead by then.'

"'If you are,' Sally countered, 'you can't take it with you, so you might as well buy the ticket'."

SIGN OF THE TIMES

Postwar courtesy is rearing its welcome head again. J. A. Connally, of 4109 Emery pl. nw., reports that the Lad Mills Service Station at Wisconsin ave. and Q st. nw. displays this sign:

"Gas free if windshield isn't cleaned."

Do you suppose that the day is coming when the new car dealers will also be glad to see a prospective customer walk in?

AN OFFICER— AND A GENTLEMAN

Virginia L. Wyche of 1283 Penn st. ne. was driving along Route 1, near Savage, Md., when a State trooper signalled her to pull over.

"You went through a red light," said the cop, getting out his book.

"But it changed as I was going through," protested Mrs. Wyche. "I really couldn't help it."

"Sorry," said the policeman firmly. "I'm afraid I'm going to have to give you a ticket. And, incidentally, do you know that one of your tires is going flat?"

"Oh, dear," exclaimed the lady, as ladies will in such circumstances. "What will I do?"

Gallantly, the State policeman rose to the occasion. He got out his tools and fixed the tire.

When he was finished, he waved Mrs. Wyche on her way with a cheery goodbye. But the ticket stuck.

EXPLANATION

If you see a man wearing a diaper pin in his lapel, treat him gently. He's probably an expectant father.

The National Institute of Diaper Services is now forming expectant fathers into local clubs, and the club emblem is a diaper pin.

The institute explains that everybody caters to the expectant mother but, heretofore, papa has been The Forgotten Man. The idea of the club is to give him proper recognition.

Very laudable—but instruction in the correct method of burping a baby would be more practical.

HOME SWEET HOME

Frank B. Marks, Poundmaster of the District Dog Pound, has a favorite story which is still very funny, although it dates back several years.

It seems that one night a bunch of young scamps cut the wire fence at the Pound, permitting all 15 guests therein to escape.

But shortly afterward, Marks found 11 of the 15 waiting for him at the front door, eager to get back in.

They like it there.

Grin and Bear It

"Whenever I feel I'm off my game, Joe, I try going back to the office for a day or so—!"

The Bridge Deck

By Florence Osborn

A gorgeous mixup occurred on today's freak hand, dealt at a recent duplicate on Long Island. A player, holding 11 top clubs, heard his partner outbid him at seven diamonds. This impossible contract might have destroyed a beautiful partnership but the opponent gallantly stepped in with a save against nothing at seven spades.

Today's Hand

WEST DEALER

	♠ J 10 4 3 ♡ Q J 10 5 2 ◇ 10 9 ♣ 9 4
♠ 5 ♡ None ◇ 9 ♣ A K Q J 10 8 7 6 5 3 2	WEST	NORTH EAST SOUTH
	♠ A K Q 9 8 ♡ 6 2 ♡ 9 8 3 ◇ Q 7 ♣ None	♠ None ♡ A K 7 6 ◇ 4 ◇ A K J 6 5 4 3 2 ♣ None

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
2 ♣	Pass	2 ◇	4 ♠
4 NT	Pass	5 ♡	5 ♠
6 ♣	Pass	7 ◇	7 ♠
Pass	Pass	Dble	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 9 ◇.

He went down five tricks, doubled at this bid for 900 points, which was a great deal better than his opponent could have done had he been left to stew in seven diamonds, having no place to put heart losers.

At spades South lost two diamonds, two hearts and a heart ruff. One West player was allowed to play the hand at six clubs and so won top on the board, scoring 940 points.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Portraits

By James J. Metcalfe

What have we done?

Today we praise and honor those . . . Who fell before the foe . . . To make the world a better place . . . In which to live and grow . . . They are immortal and the soil . . . Is sacred where they lie . . . And over their revered remains . . . Our flag is flying high . . . They heard the call and gave their all . . . To keep our country free . . . And sow the seed of lasting peace . . . For all humanity. . . . They well deserve the praise we give . . . But how do we compare? . . . Have we been really true to them . . . And have we done our share? . . . Because unless we try to make . . . Our victory again . . . The world will be no better and . . . They will have died in vain.

Put on Banks' Eligible List

Preston Delano, Comptroller of the Currency, announced yesterday that national banks will be allowed to purchase bonds of the World Bank up to the full legal limit of 10 per cent of their capital and surplus.

Actually, however, the World Bank bonds will not be available to investors before July or August when the World Bank is expected to put an issue of about 250 million dollars on the market.

The Comptroller has authority to designate certain securities as "eligible" for national bank investment up to the 10 per cent limit. Without such designation by him, the securities could not be bought by these banks in that large a quantity.
